

A KEY

TO THE EXERCISES

ADAPTED TO

L. MURRAY'S

ENGLISH GRAMMAR.

BY THE AUTHOR OF THE EXERCISES.

L O N D O N :

PRINTED FOR T. N. LONGMAN AND O. REES, PATERNOSTER-ROW; DARTON AND HARVEY, GRACECHURCH-STREET; AND WILSON, SPENCE, AND MAWMAN, YORK.

1799.

3 1 2 1 0 9 1 3 4

Digitized by the Internet Archive in 2007 with funding from Microsoft Corporation

KEY TO THE EXERCISES.

PART II. ORTHOGRAPHY.

CHAP. I.

Containing corrections of the false Orthography, arranged under the Rules.

RULE I.

Gram. p. 23. 4th edit.

IT is no great merit to spell properly; but a great defect to do it incorrectly.

Jacob worshipped his Creator, leaning on the top of his staff.

We may place too little as well as too much stress upon dreams.

Our manners should be neither gross, nor excessively refined.

RULE II.

A car signifies a chariot of war, or a small carriage of burden.

In the names of drugs and plants, the mistake in a word may endanger life.

Nor undelightful is the ceaseless hum
To him who muses through the woods at noon.

The fin of a fish is the limb, by which he balances his body, and moves in the water.

Many a trap is laid to ensnare the feet of youth.

Many thousand families are supported by the simple business of making mats.

RULE III.

We should subject our fancies to the government of reason.

If thou art seeking for the living amongst the dead, thou weariest thyself in vain.

If we have denied ourselves of sinful pleasures, we shall be great gainers in the end.

We shall not be the happier for possessing talents and affluence, unless we make a right use of them.

The truly good mind is not dismayed by poverty, afflictions, or death.

RULE IV.

It is a great blessing to have a sound mind, uninfluenced by fanciful humours.

Common calamities, and common blessings, fall heavily upon the envious.

The comeliness of youth are modesty and frankness; of age, condescension and dignity.

When we act against conscience, we become the destroyers of our own peace.

We may be playful, and yet innocent; grave, and yet corrupt. It is only from general conduct, that our true character can be portrayed.

RULE V.

WHEN we bring the law-maker into contempt, we have in effect annulled his laws.

By deferring our repentance, we accumulate our sorrows.

The pupils of a certain ancient philosopher, were not, during their first years of study, permitted to ask any questions.

We all have many failings and lapses to lament and recover.

There is no affliction with which we are visited, that may not be improved to our advantage.

The Christian Lawgiver has prohibited many things, which the heathen philosophers allowed.

RULE VI.

Restlessness of mind disqualifies us, both for the enjoyment of peace, and the performance of our duty.

The arrows of calumny fall harmlessly at the feet of virtue.

The road to the blissful regions, is as open to the peasant as to the king.

A chilnefs or shivering of the body generally precedes a fever.

To recommend virtue to others, our lights must shine brightly, not dully.

The silent stranger stood amaz'd to see
Contempt of wealth, and wilful poverty.

RULE VII.

The warmth of disputation, destroys that sedateness of mind which is necessary to discover truth.

All these with ceaseless praise his works behold,
Both day and night.

In all our reasonings, our minds should be sincerely employed in the pursuit of truth.

Rude behaviour, and indecent language, are peculiarly disgraceful to youth of education.

The true worship of God is an important and awful service.

Wisdom alone is truly fair : folly only appears so.

RULE VIII.

The study of the English language is making daily advancement.

A judicious arrangement of studies facilitates improvement.

To shun allurements is not hard,
To minds resolv'd, forewarn'd, and well prepar'd.

RULE IX.

Every person and thing connected with self, is apt to appear good and desirable in our eyes.

Errors and misconduct are more excusable in ignorant, than in well-instructed persons.

The divine laws are not reversible by those of men.

Gratitude is a forcible and active principle in good and generous minds.

Our natural and involuntary defects of body, are not chargeable upon us.

We are made to be serviceable to others, as well as to ourselves.

RULE X.

An obliging and humble disposition, is totally unconnected with a servile and cringing humour.

By solacing the sorrows of others, the heart is improved at the same time that our duty is performed.

Labour and expense are lost upon a dronish spirit.

The inadvertencies of youth may be excused, but knawish tricks should meet with severe reproof.

RULE XI.

Love worketh no ill to our neighbour, and is the fulfilling of the law.

That which is sometimes expedient, is not always so.

We may be hurtful to others, by our example, as well as by personal injuries.

Where diligence opens the door of the understanding, and impartiality keeps it, truth finds an entrance and a welcome too.

CHAP. II.

Containing corrections of the false Orthography, promiscuously arranged.

SECT. I.

NEGLECT no opportunity of doing good.

No man can steadily build upon accidents.

How shall we keep, what, sleeping or awake,
A weaker may surprise, a stronger take?

Neither time nor misfortunes should erase the remembrance of a friend.

Moderation should preside, both in the kitchen and the parlour.

Shall we receive good at the Divine hand, and shall we not receive evil?

In many designs, we may succeed and be miserable.

We should have sense and virtue enough to recede from our demands, when they appear to be unrea- sonable.

All our comforts proceed from the Father of Goodness.

The ruin of a state is generally preceded by a universal degeneracy of manners, and a contempt of religion.

His father omitted nothing in his education, that might render him virtuous and useful.

The daw in the fable was dressed in pilfered ornaments.

A favour conferred with delicacy, doubles the obligation.

They tempted their Creator, and limited the Holy One of Israel.

The precepts of a good education have often recurred in the time of need.

We are frequently benefited by what we have dreaded.

It is no great virtue to live lovingly with good natured and meek persons.

The Christian religion gives a more lovely character of God, than any religion ever did.

Without sinistrous views, they are dexterous managers of their own interest.

Any thing committed to the trust and care of another, is a deposite.

Here finish'd he, and all that he had made
View'd and beheld! All was entirely good.

It deserves our best skill to inquire into those rules, by which we may guide our judgment.

Food, clothing, and habitations, are the rewards of industry.

If we lay no restraint upon our lusts, no control upon our appetites and passions, they will hurry us into guilt and misery.

An Independent is one who, in religious affairs, holds that every congregation is a complete Church.

Receive his counsel, and securely move:

Intrust thy fortune to the Power above.

Following life in creatures we dissect,

We lose it in the moment we detect.

The acknowledgment of our transgressions must precede the forgiveness of them.

Judicious abridgments often aid the studies of youth.

Examine how thy humour is inclin'd,
And which the ruling passion of thy mind.

———— He falters at the question :

His fears, his words, his looks, declare him guilty.

Calico is an Indian stuff made of cotton; sometimes stained with lively colours.

To promote iniquity in others, is nearly the same as being the actors of it ourselves.

The glazier's business was unknown to the ancients.

The antecedent, in grammar, is the noun to which the relative refers.

SECT. 2.

Be not afraid of the wicked: they are under the control of Providence. Consciousness of guilt may justly affright us.

Convey to others no intelligence which you would be ashamed to avow.

Many are weighed in the balance, and found wanting.

How many disappointments have, in their consequences, saved a man from ruin!

A well-poized mind makes a cheerful countenance.

A certain householder planted a vineyard, but the men employed in it made ungrateful returns.

Let us show diligence in every laudable undertaking.

Cinnamon is the fragrant bark of a low tree in the island of Ceylon.

A ram will butt with his head, though he be brought up tame, and never saw the action.

We perceive a piece of silver in a basin, when water is poured on it, though we could not discover it before.

Virtue embalms the memory of the good.

The King of Great Britain is a limited monarch; and the British nation a free people.

The physician may dispense the medicine, but Providence alone can bless it.

In many pursuits, we embark with pleasure, and land sorrowfully.

Rocks, mountains, and caverns, are of indispensable use, both to the earth and to man.

The hive of a city, or kingdom, is in the best condition, when there is the least noise or buzz in it.

The roughnesses found on our entrance into the paths of virtue and learning, grow smoother as we advance.

That which was once the most beautiful spot of Italy, covered with palaces, embellished by Emperours, and celebrated by poets, has now nothing to show but ruins.

Battering rams were anciently used to beat down the walls of a city.

Jockey signifies a man that rides horses in a race; or who deals in horses.

The harmlessness of many animals, and the enjoyment which they have of life, should plead for them against cruel usage.

We may be very busy, to no useful purpose.

We cannot plead in abatement of our guilt, that we are ignorant of our duty.

Genuine charity, how liberal soever it may be, will never empowerish ourselves. If we sow sparingly, we shall reap accordingly.

However disagreeable, we must resolutely perform our duty.

A fit of sickness is often a kind chastisement and discipline, to moderate our affection for the things of this life.

It is a happiness to young persons, when they are preserved from the snares of the world, as in a garden enclosed.

Health and peace, the most valuable possessions are obtained at small expense.

Incense signifies perfumes exhaled by fire, and made use of in religious ceremonies.

The prudent despatch of business gains time; the imprudent, wastes it.

Few reflections are more distressing, than those which we make on our own ingratitude.

There is an inseparable connexion between piety and virtue.

Many actions have a fair complexion, which have not sprung from virtue.

Which way soever we turn ourselves, we are encountered with sensible demonstrations of a Deity.

If we forsake the ways of virtue, we cannot allege any colour of ignorance, or want of instruction.

SECT. 3.

There are more cultivators of the earth, than of their own hearts.

Man is encompassed with dangers innumerable.

War is attended with distressful and desolating effects. It is confessedly the scourge of our angry passions.

The earth is the Lord's, and the fulness thereof.

The harvest truly is plenteous, but the labourers are few.

The greater our incitements to evil, the greater will be our victory and reward.

We should not encourage persons to do what they believe to be wrong.

Virtue is placed between two extremes, which are on both sides equally blamable.

We should continually have the goal in our eyes, which would direct us in the race.

The gaols were forced open, and the prisoners set free.

It cannot be said that we are charitable donors when our gifts proceed from selfish motives.

Strait is the gate, and narrow the way, that lead to life eternal.

Integrity leads us straight forward, disdaining all doublings, and crooked paths.

Licentiousness and crimes pave the way to ruin.

Words are the counters of wise men, but the money of fools.

Recompense to no man evil for evil.

He was an excellent person; a mirror of ancient faith in early youth.

Meekness controls our angry passions; candour our severe judgments.

He is not only a descendant from pious ancestors, but an inheritor too of their virtues.

An idle person spends his time, and eats the fruits of the earth, like a vermine or a wolf.

Faithfulness and judgment are peculiarly requisite in testamentary executors.

To be faithful among the faithless, argues great strength of principle.

Mountains appear to be like so many wens or unnatural protuberances on the face of the earth.

In some places the sea encroaches upon the land; in others, the land upon the sea.

Philosophers agreed in despising riches, as the encumbrances of life.

Wars are regulated robberies and piracies.

Fishes increase more than beasts or birds, as appears from their numerous spawn.

The pyramids of Egypt have stood more than three thousand years.

Precepts have small influence, when not enforced by example.

How has kind heav'n adorn'd the happy land,
And scatter'd blessings with a wasteful hand!

A friend exaggerates a man's virtues, an enemy inflames his crimes.

A witty and humorous vein has often produced enemies.

Neither pleasure nor business should engross our time and affections; proper seasons should be allotted for retirement.

It is laudable to inquire before we determine.

Many have been visited with afflictions, who have not profited by them.

We may be successful, and yet disappointed.

SECT. 4.

The experience of want enhances the value of plenty.

To maintain opinions stiffly, is no evidence of their truth, or of our moderation.

Hoarhound has been famous for its medicinal qualities; but it is now little used.

The wicked are often insnared in the trap which they lay for others.

It is hard to say what diseases are curable: they are all under the guidance of heaven.

Instructors should not only be skilful in those sciences which they teach; but have skill in the method of teaching, and patience in the practice.

Science strengthens and enlarges the minds of men.

A steady mind may receive counsel; but there is no hold on a changeable humour.

We may inure ourselves by custom, to bear the extremities of weather without injury.

Excessive merriment is the parent of grief.

Air is sensible to the touch by its motion, and by its resistance to bodies moved in it.

A polite address is sometimes the cloak of malice.

To practise virtue is the sure way to love it.

Many things are plausible in theory, which fail in practice.

Learning and knowledge must be attained by slow degrees; and are the reward only of diligence and patience.

We should study to live peaceably with all men.

A soul that can securely death defy,
And count it nature's privilege to die.

Whatever promotes the interest of the soul, is also conducive to our present felicity.

Let not the sternness of virtue affright us; she will soon become amiable.

The spacious firmament on high,
With all the blue etherial sky,
And spangled heav'ns a shining frame,
Their great original proclaim.

Passion is the drunkenness of the mind: it super- sedes the workings of reason.

If we are sincere, we may be assured of an advocate to intercede for us.

We ought not to consider the increase of another's reputation, as a diminution of our own.

The rheumatism is a painful distemper, supposed to proceed from acrid humours.

The beautiful and accomplished, are too apt to study behaviour rather than virtue.

The peasant's cabin contains as much content as the Emperour's palace.

True valour protects the feeble, and humbles the oppressor.

David, the son of Jesse, was a wise and valiant man.

Prophecies and miracles proclaimed Jesus Christ to be the Saviour of the world.

Esau sold his birthright for a savoury mess of pottage.

A regular and virtuous education, is an inestimable blessing.

Honour and shame from no condition rise;
Act well your part, there all the honour lies.

The rigour of monkish discipline often conceals great depravity of heart.

We should recollect, that however favourable we may be to ourselves, we are rigorously examined by others.

SECT. 5.

Virtue can render youth, as well as old age, honourable.

Rumour often tells false tales.

Weak minds are ruffled by trifling things.

The cabbage-tree is very common in the Caribbee Islands, where it grows to a prodigious height.

Visit the sick, feed the hungry, clothe the naked.

His smiles and tears are too artificial to be relied on.

The most essential virtues of a Christian, are love to God and benevolence to man.

We should be cheerful without levity.

A calendar signifies a register of the year; and a calender, a press in which clothiers smoothe their cloth.

Integrity and hope are the sure softners of sorrow.

Chamomile is an odoriferous plant, and possesses considerable medicinal virtues.

The gaiety of youth should be tempered by the precepts of age.

Certainty, even on distressful occasions, is sometimes more eligible than suspense.

Still green with bays each ancient altar stands
Above the reach of sacrilegious hands.

The most acceptable sacrifice is that of a contrite and humble heart.

We are accountable for whatever we patronise in others.

It marks a savage disposition, to torture animals, to make them smart and agonize, for our diversion.

The edge of cloth, where it is closed by complicating the threads, is called the selvage.

Souchong tea and Turkey coffee were his favourite beverage; chocolate he seldom drank.

The guilty mind cannot avoid many melancholy apprehensions.

If we injure others, we must expect retaliation.

Let every man be fully persuaded in his own mind.

Peace and honour are the sheaves of virtue's harvest.

The black earth, every where obvious on the surface of the earth, we call mould.

The Roman pontiff claims to be the supreme head of the church on earth.

High-seasoned food vitiates the palate, and disgusts it with plain fare.

The conscious receiver is as bad as the thief.

Alexander, the conqueror of the world, was, in fact, a robber and a murderer.

The Divine Being is not only the Author, but the Governour of the world.

Honest endeavours, if persevered in, will finally be successful.

He who dies for religion, is a martyr; he who suffers for it is a confessor.

In the paroxysm of passion, we sometimes give occasion for a life of repentance.

The mist which envelopes many studies, is dissipated when we approach them.

The voice is sometimes obstructed by a hoarseness, or by viscous phlegm.

The desert shall rejoice, and blossom as the rose.

The fruit and sweetmeats set on table after the meat, are called the dessert.

We traversed the flowery fields, till the falling dews admonished us to return.

SECT. 6.

There is frequently a worm at the root of our most flourishing condition.

The stalk of ivy is tough, and not fragile.

The roof is vaulted, and distils fresh water from every part of it.

Our imperfections are discernible by others, when we think they are concealed.

They think they shall be heard for their much speaking.

True criticism is not a captious, but a liberal art.

Integrity is our best defence against the evils of life.

No circumstance can license evil, or dispense with the rules of virtue.

We may be ciphers in the world's estimation, whilst we are advancing our own and others' value.

The person of an ambassador is inviolable.

A diphthong is the coalition of two vowels to form one sound.

However forcible our temptations, they may be resisted.

I acknowledge my transgression; and my sin is ever before me.

The college of Cardinals are the electors of the Pope.

He had no colourable excuse to palliate his conduct.

Thy humorous vein, thy pleasing folly,
Lie all neglected, all forgot.

If we are so conceited as obstinately to reject all advice, we must expect a dereliction of friends.

Chronology is the science of computing and adjusting the periods of time.

In groves we live, and lie on mossy beds,
By crystal streams, that murmur thro' the meads.

It is a secret cowardice which induces us to compliment the vices of our superiors, to applaud the libertine, and laugh with the profane.

The lark each morning waked me with her sprightly lay.

There are no fewer than thirty-two species of the ily.

We owe it to our visitors as well as to ourselves, to entertain them with useful and sensible conversation.

Sponsors are those who become sureties for the children's education in the Christian faith.

The warrior's fame is often purchased by the blood of thousands.

Hope exhilarates the mind, and is the grand elixir, under all the evils of life.

The incense of gratitude, whilst it expresses our duty, and honours our benefactor, perfumes and regales ourselves.

PART III.

SYNTAX.

CHAP. I.

Containing corrections of the false Syntax, arranged under the Rules.

RULE I.

Gram. p. 115. 4th edit.

DISAPPOINTMENTS sink the heart of man ; but the renewal of hope gives consolation.

The smiles that encourage severity of judgment, hide malice and insincerity.

He dares not act contrary to his instructions.

Fifty pounds of wheat contain forty pounds of flower.

The mechanism of clocks and watches, was totally unknown a few centuries ago.

The number of the inhabitants of Great Britain and Ireland, does not exceed ten millions.

Nothing but vain and foolish pursuits delights some persons.

The conditions of the agreement were as follows.

The conditions of the agreement were such as follow.

I shall consider such of his censures only as concern my friend.

He is an author of more credit than Plutarch, or any other, that writes lives by the lump.

The inquisitive and curious are generally talkative.

Great pains have been taken to reconcile the parties.

I am sorry to say it, but there were more equivocators than one.

The sincere are always esteemed.

Have the goods been sold to advantage? and didst thou embrace the proper season?

There are many occasions in life, in which silence and simplicity are true wisdom.

The generous never recount minutely the actions they have done; nor the prudent those they will do.

He needs not proceed in such haste.

The business that related to ecclesiastical meetings, matters, and persons, was to be ordered according to the king's direction.

In him was happily blended true dignity with softness of manners.

The support of so many of his relations, was a heavy tax upon his industry; but thou knowest he paid it cheerfully.

What avail the best sentiments, if persons do not live suitably to them?

Reconciliation was offered, on conditions as moderate as were consistent with a permanent union.

Not one of them whom thou seest clothed in purple, is happy.

And the fame of this person, and of his wonderful actions, was diffused throughout the country.

The variety of the productions of genius, like that of the operations of nature, is without limit.

In vain our flocks and fields increase our store,
When our abundance makes us wish for more.

Thou shouldst love thy neighbour, as sincerely as thou lovest thyself.

Hast thou no better reason for censuring thy friend and companion ?

Thou, who art the Author and Bestower of life, canst doubtless restore it also ; but whether thou wilt please to restore it, or not, that thou only knowest.

“ O thou my voice inspire,
Who touch'd Isaiah's hallow'd lips with fire.”

“ Who touchedst or didst touch.”

Accept these grateful tears ; for thee they flow :
For thee, that ever felt another's woe.

“ Didst feel.”

Just of thy word, in every thought sincere ;
Who knew no wish but what the world might hear.

“ Who knewest or didst know.”

The following examples are adapted to the notes and observations under RULE I.

1. To do unto all men, as we would that they, in similar circumstances, should do unto us, constitutes the great principle of virtue.

From a fear of the world's censure, to be ashamed of the practice of precepts, which the heart approves and embraces, marks a feeble and imperfect character.

The erroneous opinions which we form concerning happiness and misery, give rise to all the mistaken and dangerous passions that embroil our life.

To live soberly, righteously, and piously, is required of all men.

That it is our duty to promote the purity of our minds and bodies, to be just and kind to our fellow-creatures, and to be pious and faithful to him that made us, admits not of any doubt in a rational and well-informed mind.

To be of a pure and humble mind, to exercise benevolence towards others, to cultivate piety towards God, are the sure means of becoming peaceful and happy.

It is an important truth, that religion, vital religion, the religion of the heart, is the most powerful auxiliary of reason, in waging war with the passions, and promoting that sweet composure which constitutes the peace of God.

The possession of our senses entire, of our limbs uninjured, of a sound understanding, of friends and companions, is often overlooked, though it would be the ultimate wish of many, who, as far as we can judge, deserve it as much as ourselves.

All that makes a figure on the great theatre of the world, the employments of the busy, the enterprises of the ambitious, and the exploits of the warlike, the virtues which form the happiness, and the crimes which occasion the misery of mankind, originate in that silent and secret recess of thought, which is hidden from every human eye.

2. If the privileges to which he has an undoubted right, and which had been long enjoyed, should now be wrested from him, it would be flagrant injustice.

These curiosities we have imported from China, and they are similar to those which were some time ago brought from Africa.

Will martial flames for ever fire thy mind,
And wilt thou never be to heav'n resign'd?

3. When two substantives come together, and do not signify the same thing, the first of them must be in the genitive case.

Such is the constitution of men, that virtue, however it may be neglected for a time, will ultimately be acknowledged and respected.

4. The crown of virtue are peace and honour.
His chief occupation and enjoyment was controversy.

5. ————— He destroy'd,
Or won to what may work his utter loss,
All this will soon follow.

————— Whose grey top
Shall tremble, be descending.

RULE II.

Idleness and ignorance are the parents of many vices.

Wisdom, virtue, happiness, dwell with the golden mediocrity.

Time and tide wait for no man.

His politeness and good disposition were, on failure of their effect, entirely changed.

Patience and diligence, like ^afaith, remove mountains.

Humility and knowledge, with poor apparel, excel pride and ignorance under costly attire.

The planetary system, boundless space, and the immense ocean, affect the mind with sensations of astonishment.

Humility and love, whatever obscurities may involve religious tenets, constitute the essence of true religion.

Religion and virtue, our best support and highest honour, confer on the mind principles of noble independence.

What signify the counsel and care of preceptors, when youth think they have no need of assistance?

The examples which follow, are suited to the notes and observations under RULE II.

1. Much do human pride and self-complacency require some correction.

Luxurious living, and high pleasures, beget a languor and satiety that destroy all enjoyment.

Pride and self-sufficiency stifle sentiments of dependence on our Creator: levity and attachment to worldly pleasures, destroy the sense of gratitude to him.

2. Good order in our affairs, not mean savings, produces great profits.

The following treatise, together with those that accompany it, was written, many years ago, for my own private satisfaction.

That great senator, in concert with several other eminent persons, was the projector of the revolution.

The religion of these people, as well as their customs and manners, was strangely misrepresented.

Virtue, joined to knowledge and wealth, confers great influence and respectability. But knowledge, with wealth united, if virtue be wanting, has a very limited influence, and is often despised.

That superficial scholar and critic, like some renowned critics of our own, has furnished most decisive proofs, that he knew not the characters of the Hebrew language.

The buildings of the institution have been enlarged; the expense of which, added to the increased price of provisions, renders it necessary to advance the terms of admission.

3. Thou, and the gardener, and the huntsman, must share the blame of this business amongst you.

My sister and I, as well as my brother, are daily employed in our respective occupations.

RULE III.

Man's happiness or misery is, in a great measure, put into his own hands.

We are not such machines as a clock or watch, which moves merely as it is moved.

Despise no infirmity of mind or body, nor any condition of life; for it is, perhaps, to be thy own lot.

Speaking impatiently to servants, or any thing that betrays inattention or ill-humour, is certainly criminal.

There are many faults in spelling, which neither analogy nor pronunciation justifies.

When sickness, infirmity, or reverse of fortune, affects us, the sincerity of friendship is proved.

Let it be remembered, that it is not the uttering, or the hearing of certain words, that constitutes the worship of the Almighty.

A tart reply, a proneness to rebuke, or a captious and contradictory spirit, is capable of embittering domestic life, and of setting friends at variance.

The following sentences exemplify the notes and observations under RULE III.

1. Either thou or I am greatly mistaken, in our judgment on this subject.

I or thou art the person, who must undertake the business proposed.

2. One or both of the scholars were present at the transaction.

Some parts of the ship and cargo were recovered; but neither the captain nor the sailors, were saved.

Whether one person, or more than one, were concerned in the business, does not yet appear.

The deceitfulness of riches, or the cares of this life, have choked the seeds of virtue in many a promising mind.

RULE IV.

The people rejoice in that which should give them sorrow.

The flock, and not the fleece, is, or ought to be, the object of the shepherd's care.

The court has just ended, after having sat through the trial of a very long cause.

The crowd was so great, that the judges with difficulty made their way through it.

The corporation of York consists of a Mayor, Aldermen, and Common-Council.

The British Parliament is composed of King, Lords, and Commons.

When the nation complains, the rulers should listen to its voice.

In the days of youth, the multitude eagerly pursue pleasure as their chief good.

The church has no power to inflict corporal punishment.

The fleet was seen sailing up the channel.

A great number does, not always argue strength.

The meeting has established several salutary regulations.

The council were not unanimous, and they separated without coming to any determination.

The fleet are all arrived and moored in safety.

This people draw near to me with their mouth, and honour me with their lips, but their heart is far from me.

The committee were divided in their sentiments, and they have referred the business to the general meeting.

The committee was very full when this point was decided; and its judgment has not been called in question.

Why does this generation wish for greater evidence, when so much is already given?

The remnant of the people was persecuted with great severity.

Never was any people so much infatuated as the Jewish nation.

The shoal of herrings was of an immense extent.

No society is chargeable with the disapproved, misconduct of particular members.

RULE V.

THE exercise of reason appears as little in these sportsmen, as in the beasts which they sometimes hunt, and by which they are sometimes hunted.

They who seek wisdom will certainly find her.

The male amongst birds seems to discover no beauty, but in the colour of his species.

Take handfuls of ashes of the furnace, and let Moses sprinkle them towards the heaven, in the sight of Pharaoh; and they shall become small dust.

Rebecca took goodly raiment, which was with her in the house, and put it upon Jacob.

The wheel killed another man, who makes the sixth that has lost his life, by this means.

The fair sex, whose task is not to mingle in the labours of public life, have their own part assigned them to act.

The Hercules ship of war foundered at sea; she overset, and lost most of her men.

The mind of man cannot be long without some food to nourish the activity of its thoughts.

What is the reason, that our language is less refined than that of Italy, Spain, or France?

I do not think any one should incur censure for being tender of his reputation.

Thou who hast been a witness of the fact, canst give an account of it.

In religious concerns, or those which are conceived to be such, every man must stand or fall by the decision of the Great Judge.

Something like what has been here premised, is the conjecture of Dryden.

Thou great First Cause, least understood!

Who all my sense confin'd

To know but this, that thou art good,

And that myself am blind:

Yet gave me in this dark estate, &c.

“Confin'dst or didst confine:” “Gavest or didst give.”

What art thou, speak, that, on designs unknown,

While others sleep, thus range the camp alone?

“Rangest or dost range.”

The following examples are adapted to the notes and observations under RULE V.

1. Whoever entertains such an opinion, judges erroneously.

The cares of this world often choke the growth of virtue.

Disappointments and afflictions, however disagreeable, often improve us.

2. Moses was the meekest man that we read of in the Old Testament.

Humility is one of the most amiable virtues that we can possess.

They are the same persons that assisted us yesterday.

The men and things that he has studied have not improved his morals.

3. How beautiful soever they appear, they have no real merit.

In what light soever we view him, his conduct will bear inspection.

On which side soever they are contemplated, they appear to advantage.

How much soever he might despise the maxims of the king's administration, he kept a total silence on that subject.

4. Which of those two persons has most distinguished himself?

None more impatiently suffer injuries, than they who are most forward in doing them.

5. He would not be persuaded that I was not greatly in fault.

These commendations of his children, appear to have been made in a manner which is, in some respects, injudicious: or, appear to be, in some respects, injudicious.

6. He instructed and fed the crowds that surrounded him.

Sidney was one of the wisest and most active governors, that Ireland had enjoyed for several years.

He was the ablest minister that James ever possessed.

The court, which gives currency to manners, ought to be exemplary.

I am happy in the friend whom I have long proved.

7. The child that we have just seen, is wholesomely fed, and not injured by bandages or clothing.

He is like a beast of prey, that destroys without pity.

8. Having once disgusted him, he could never regain the favour of Nero, which was indeed another name for cruelty.

Flattery, the nature of which is to deceive and betray, should be avoided as the poisonous adder.

Which of those men came to his assistance?

9. The king, who had never before committed so unjust an action, dismissed his minister without any enquiry.

There are in the empire of China, millions of people, whose support is derived almost entirely from rice.

10. His continual endeavours to serve us, notwithstanding our ingratitude, are remarkable. Or—It is remarkable, that he is continually endeavouring to serve us, notwithstanding our ingratitude.

His assertion, though paradoxical, is indisputably true.

11. Ah! unhappy thou, who art deaf to the calls of duty and of honour.

Oh! happy us, surrounded with so many blessings.

RULE VI.

We are dependent on each other's assistance: who is there that can subsist by himself?

If he will not hear his best friend, who shall be sent to admonish him?

They, to whom much is given, will have much to answer for.

It is not to be expected that they, who, in early life, have been dark and deceitful, should afterwards become fair and ingenuous.

They who have laboured to make us wise and good, are the persons whom we ought to love and respect, and to whom we ought to be grateful.

The persons, whom conscience and virtue support, may smile at the caprices of fortune.

From the character of those with whom you associate, your own will be estimated.

That is the student to whom I gave the book, and who, I am persuaded, deserves it.

RULE VII.

I acknowledge that I am the person, who adopts that sentiment, and maintains the propriety of such measures.

Thou art the friend that has often relieved me, and that has not deserted me now in the time of peculiar need.

I am the man who approves of wholesome discipline, and who recommends it to others: but I am not a person who promotes useless severity, or who objects to mild and generous treatment.

I perceive that thou art a pupil, who possesses bright parts, but who has cultivated them but little.

Thou art he who breathes on the earth with the breath of spring, and who covers it with verdure and beauty.

I am the Lord thy God, who teaches thee to profit, and who leads thee by the way thou shouldst go.

Thou art the Lord who chose Abraham, and brought him forth out of Ur of the Chaldees.

RULE VIII.

This kind of indulgences softens and injures the mind.

Instead of improving yourselves, you have been playing these two hours.

That sort of favours did real injury, under the appearance of kindness.

The chasm made by the earthquake was twenty feet broad, and one hundred fathoms in depth.

How many sorrows should we avoid, if we were not industrious to make them.

He saw one person, or more than one, enter the garden.

The examples which follow, are suited to the notes and observations under RULE VIII.

1. Charles was extravagant, and by this means became poor and despicable.

It was by that ungenerous means that he obtained his end.

Industry is the means of obtaining competency.

Though a promising measure, it is a means which I cannot adopt.

This person embraced every opportunity to display his talents; and by this means rendered himself ridiculous.

Joseph was industrious, frugal, and discreet; and by these means obtained property and reputation.

2. Each of them, in his turn, receives the benefits to which he is entitled.

My counsel to each of you is, that he make it his endeavour to come to a friendly agreement.

By discussing what relates to each particular, in its order, we shall better understand the subject.

Every person, whatever be his station, is bound by the duties of morality and religion.

Every leaf, every twig, every drop of water, teems with life.

Every man's heart and temper are productive of much inward joy or bitterness.

Whatever he undertakes, either his pride or his folly disgusts us.

Neither of those men seems to have any idea, that his opinions may be ill-founded.

When benignity and gentleness reign within, we are always least in hazard from without: every person, and every occurrence, is beheld in the most favourable light.

On each side of the river was there the tree of life.

3. She reads properly, writes very neatly, and composes accurately.

He was extremely prodigal, and his property is now nearly exhausted.

They generally succeeded; for they lived conformably to the rules of prudence.

We may reason very clearly, and exceeding strongly, without knowing that there is such a thing as a syllogism.

He had many virtues, and was exceedingly beloved.

The amputation was exceedingly well performed, and saved the patient's life.

He came agreeably to his promise, and conducted himself suitably to the occasion.

He speaks very fluently, reads excellently, but does not think very coherently.

He behaved himself submissively, and was exceedingly careful not to give offence.

They rejected the advice, and conducted themselves exceeding indiscreetly.

He is a person of great abilities, and exceedingly upright; and is likely to be a very useful member of the community.

The conspiracy was the more easily discovered, from its being known to many.

Not being fully acquainted with the subject, he could not affirm more strongly than he did.

He was so deeply impressed with the subject, that few could speak more nobly upon it.

We may credit his testimony; for he says expressly, that he saw the transaction.

Use a little wine for thy stomach's sake, and thy frequent infirmities.

From these favourable beginnings, we may hope for a speedy and prosperous issue.

He addressed several exhortations to them suitable to their circumstances.

Conformable to their vehemence of thought, was their vehemence of gesture.

We should implant in the minds of youth, such seeds and principles of piety and virtue, as are likely to take the earliest and deepest root.

4. It is easier to build two chimneys than to maintain one.

The tongue is like a race-horse; which runs the faster the less weight it carries.

The pleasures of the understanding are preferable to those of the imagination, or of sense.

The nightingale sings: her's is the sweetest voice in the grove.

The Most High hath created us for his glory, and our own happiness.

The Supreme Being is the wisest, the most powerful, and the best of beings.

5. Virtue confers supreme dignity on man; and should be his chief desire.

His assertion was better founded than that of his opponent; nay, the latter's words were not true.

His work is well executed; his brother's still better; and his father's the best of all.

6. A talent of this kind would, perhaps, prove the likeliest of all to succeed. Or—prove more likely than any other to succeed.

He is the stronger of the two, but not the wiser.

He spoke with so much propriety, that I understood him the best of all who spoke on the subject. Or—better than any other who spoke on the subject.

Eve was fairer than any of her daughters.

7. Religion raises men above themselves; irreligion sinks them beneath the brutes: this binds them down to a poor pitiable speck of perishable earth: that opens for them a prospect to the skies.

More rain falls in the first two summer months, than in the first two winter ones: but it makes a much greater show upon the earth in these than in those; because it lies longer upon it.

Rex and Tyrannus are of very different characters. The one rules his people by laws to which they consent; the other, by his absolute will and power; that is called freedom, this, tyranny.

8. He spoke in a manner distinct enough to be heard by the whole assembly. Or—He spoke distinctly enough to be heard by the whole assembly.

Thomas is equipped with a pair of new shoes, and a pair of new gloves : he is the servant of a rich old man.

The first two in the row are cherry-trees, the other two are pear-trees.

RULE IX.

Fire, air, earth, and water, are the four elements of philosophers.

Reason was given to man to control his passions.

We have within us an intelligent principle, distinct from the body and from matter.

Man is the noblest work of the creation.

The wisest and the best men sometimes commit errors.

Beware of drunkenness : it impairs the understanding, wastes the estate, destroys reputation, consumes the body, and renders a man of the brightest parts a common jest of the meanest clown.

He is a much better writer than reader.

The king has conferred on him the title of duke.

There are some evils of life, which equally affect the prince and the people.

We must act our part with constancy, though the reward of our constancy be distant.

We are placed here under the trial of our virtue.

Virtues like his are not easily acquired. Such qualities honour the nature of man.

Purity hath its seat in the heart ; but it extends its influence over so much of the outward conduct, as to form a great and material part of the character.

A profligate man is seldom or never found to be a good husband, a good father, or a beneficent neighbour.

True charity is not a meteor, which occasionally glares ; but a luminary, which, in its orderly and regular course, dispenses a benignant influence.

The following sentences exemplify the notes and observations under RULE IX.

1. He has been much censured for conducting himself with little attention to his business.

So bold a breach of order, called for a little severity in punishing the offender.

His error was accompanied with so little contrition and candid acknowledgment, that he found few persons to intercede for him.

There were so many mitigating circumstances attending his misconduct, particularly that of his open confession, that he found a few friends who were disposed to interest themselves in his favour.

As his misfortunes were the fruit of his own obstinacy, few persons pitied him.

2. The fear of shame, and the desire of approbation, prevent many bad actions.

In this business he was influenced by a just and a generous principle.

He was fired with the desire of doing something, though he knew not yet, with distinctness, either the end or the means.

3. At the worst, I could but incur a gentle reprimand.

At the best, his gift was but a poor offering, when we consider his estate.

RULE X.

Thy ancestor's virtue is not thine.

Thy father's offence will not condemn thee.

I will not destroy the city for ten's sake.

Nevertheless, Asa's heart was perfect with the Lord.

A mother's tenderness and a father's care, are nature's gifts for man's advantage.

A man's manners frequently influence his fortune.

Wisdom's precepts are the good boy's greatest delight.

The following examples are adapted to the notes and observations under RULE X.

1. It was the men, women, and children's lot to suffer great calamities.

Peter, John, and Andrew's occupation was that of fishermen.

This measure gained the king's as well as the people's approbation.

Not only the counsel and attorney's, but the judge's opinion also favoured his cause.

2. Moses's rod was turned into a serpent.
And he cast himself down at Jesus's feet.
For Herodias's sake, his brother Philip's wife.
If ye suffer for righteousness's sake, happy are ye.
Ye should be subject for conscience's sake.

3. They very justly condemned the senseless and extravagant conduct of the Prodigal, as he was called.
They implicitly obeyed the imperious mandates of him whom they called their protector.

4. I bought the knives at Johnson's the cutler.
The silk was purchased at Brown's the mercer and haberdasher.

The tent of Lord Feversham the general.
This palace had been the Grand Sultan Mahomet's.

I will not for David thy father's sake.
He took refuge at the governour's, the king's representative.

Whose works are these? They are Cicero's, the most eloquent of men.

5. The government of the world is not left to chance.

She married the brother of my son's wife. Or—my son's brother-in-law.

This house belongs to the partner of my wife's brother.

It was necessary to have the advice both of the physician and the surgeon.

The extent of the King of England's prerogative is sufficiently ascertained.

6. This picture of the king does not much resemble him.

These pictures of the king's were sent to him from Italy. Or—These pictures belonging to the king, &c.

This estate of the corporation is much encumbered.

That is the eldest son of the King of England. Or—The King of England's eldest son.

7. What can be the cause of the parliament's neglecting so important a business?

Much depends on this rule's being observed.

The time of William's making the experiment, at length arrived.

It is very probable that this assembly was called, to clear some doubt which the king had, about the lawfulness of the Hollanders' throwing off the monarchy of Spain, and withdrawing, for good and all, their allegiance to that crown.

If we alter the situation of any of the words, we shall presently be sensible of the melody's suffering.

Such will ever be the effect of youth's associating with vicious companions.

RULE XI.

THEY whom opulence has made proud, and whom luxury has corrupted, cannot relish the simple pleasures of nature.

Ye have reason to dread his wrath, which one day will destroy you both.

Whom have I reason to love so much as this friend of my youth?

You, who were dead, hath he quickened.

Whom did they entertain so freely?

The man whom he raised from obscurity is dead.

You only have I known of all the families of the earth.

Him and them we know, but who art thou?

Her that is idle and mischievous, reprove sharply.

Whom didst thou send to him on such an important errand?

That is the friend whom you must receive cordially, and whom you cannot esteem too highly.

He invited my brother and me to see and examine his library.

Him who committed the offence, thou shouldst correct, not me who am innocent.

We should fear and obey the author of our being, even Him who has power to reward or punish us for ever.

Whatever others do, let thee and me perform our duty.

The examples which follow, are suited to the notes and observations under RULE XI.

1. Though he takes pleasure now, he will one day repent of such unwarrantable indulgences.

The nearer his virtues approached to the great example before him, the humbler he grew.

It will be very difficult to make his conduct agree with the principles he professes.

2. To ingratiate ourselves with some, by traducing others, marks a base and despicable mind.

I shall premise two or three general observations.

3. If such maxims and such practices prevail, what is become of decency and virtue?

I have come according to the time proposed; but I am fallen upon an evil hour.

The mighty rivals have now at length agreed.

The influence of his corrupt example had then entirely ceased.

He had entered into the connexion, before the consequences were considered.

4. Well may ye be afraid; it is he indeed.

I would act the same part if I were he, or in his situation.

Search the Scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life: and they are they which testify of me.

Be composed, It is I; you have no cause for fear.

I cannot tell who has befriended me, unless it be he from whom I have received many benefits.

I know not whether they were the persons who conducted the business; but I am certain it was not he.

He so much resembled my brother, that, at first sight, I took it to be him.

After all their professions, is it possible to be they?

It could not have been she, for she always behaves discreetly.

If it was not he, whom do you imagine it to have been?

Let him be whom he may, I am not afraid of him.

Who do the people say that we are?

5. Whatever others do, let thee and me act wisely.

Let them and us unite to oppose this growing evil.

RULE XII.

It is better to live on a little, than to outlive a great deal.

Ye ought not to walk too hastily.

I wish him not to wrestle with his happiness.

I need not solicit him to do a kind action.

I dare not proceed so hastily, lest I should give offence.

I have seen some young persons conduct themselves very discreetly.

The following sentences exemplify the notes and observations under RULE XII.

1. It is a great support to virtue, when we see a good mind maintain its patience and tranquillity, under injuries and affliction, and cordially forgive its oppressors.

It is the difference of their conduct, which makes us approve the one, and reject the other.

We should not be like many persons, who depreciate the virtues they do not possess.

To see young persons, who are courted by health and pleasure, resist all the allurements of vice, and steadily pursue virtue and knowledge, is cheering and delightful to every good mind.

They acted with so much reserve, that some persons doubted their sincerity.

And the multitude wondered, when they saw the persons who had been lame, walking; and those who had been blind, seeing.

RULE XIII.

The next new year's day, I shall have been at school three years.

And he that had been dead, sat up, and began to speak.

I should be obliged to him, if he would gratify me in that particular.

And the multitude wondered, when they heard the persons who had been dumb, speaking; when they saw those who had been maimed, whole; who had been lame, walking; and who had been blind, seeing.

I have compassion on the multitude, because they have continued with me now three days.

In the treasury belonging to the cathedral in this city, has been preserved with the greatest veneration, for upwards of six hundred years, a dish which they pretend to be made of emerald.

The court of Rome gladly laid hold on all the opportunities, which the imprudence, weakness, or necessities of princes afforded it, to extend its authority.

Fierce as he moves, his silver shafts resound.

The following examples are adapted to the notes and observations under RULE XIII.

1. They maintained that scripture conclusion, that all mankind rose from one head.

John will have earned his wages, when his service shall be completed.

Ye will not come unto me, that ye may have life.

Be that as it may, he cannot justify his conduct.

I have been at London a year, and I saw the king last summer.

After we had visited London, we returned, content and thankful, to our retired and peaceful habitation.

I purpose to go to London in a few months, and after I shall have finished my business there, to proceed to America.

These prosecutions of William, seem to have been the most iniquitous measures pursued by the court, during the time that the use of parliaments was suspended.

From the little conversation I had with him, he appeared to be a man of letters.

I always intended to reward my son according to his merit.

It would have given me great satisfaction, to have relieved him from that distressed situation.

It required so much care, that I thought I should lose it before I reached home.

We have done no more than it was our duty to do.

He would have assisted one of his friends, if he could have done it without injuring the other; but, as that could not be done, he avoided all interference.

Might it not have been expected, that he would defend an authority, which had been so long exercised without controversy?

These enemies of Christianity were confounded, whilst they were expecting to find an opportunity to betray its author.

His sea-sickness was so great, that I often feared he would die before our arrival.

If these persons had intended to deceive, they would have taken care to avoid, what would have exposed them to the objections of their opponents.

It was a pleasure to receive his approbation of my labours.

It would have afforded me still greater pleasure, to have received his approbation at an earlier period: but to have received it at all, was a credit to me.

To have been censured by him, would have proved an insuperable discouragement.

Him portion'd maids, apprentic'd orphans, blest,
The young who labour, and the old who rest.

“Laboured and rested.”

RULE XIV.

ESTEEMING themselves wise, they became fools.

Suspecting not only you, but them also, I was studious to avoid all intercourse.

I could not avoid considering, in some degree, them as enemies to me; and thee, as a suspicious friend.

From having exposed himself too freely in different climates, he entirely lost his health.

The examples which follow, are suited to the notes and observations under RULE XIV.

1. By observing truth, thou wilt command esteem, as well as secure peace.

He prepared them for this event, by sending to them proper information.

A person may be great or rich by chance; but never wise or good, without taking pains for it.

Nothing could have made her so unhappy, as marrying a man who possessed such bad principles. Or—the marrying of a man, &c.

The changing of times and seasons, the removing and setting up of kings, belong to Providence alone. Or—changing times and seasons, removing and setting up kings, &c.

The middle station of life seems to be the most advantageously situated for the gaining of wisdom. Poverty turns our thoughts too much upon the supplying of our wants; and riches, upon enjoying our superfluities. Or—for gaining wisdom—upon supplying our wants.

Pliny, speaking of Cato the Cenfor's disapproving of the Grecian orators, expressed himself thus.

Propriety of pronunciation is the giving of that sound to every word which the most polite usage of the language appropriates to it. Or—is giving to every word that sound, &c Or—consists in giving to every word that sound, &c.

Not attending to this rule, is the cause of a very common error. Or—want of attention to this rule, &c.

This was in fact a converting of the deposit to his own use. Or—in fact converting the deposit, &c.

2. There wil be no danger of their spoiling of their faces, or of their gaining of converts. Or—no danger of spoiling their faces, or of gaining converts. Or—no danger that they will spoil their faces, or gain converts.

For his avoiding of that precipice, he is indebted to his friend's care. Or—For avoiding that precipice, &c.

It was from our misunderstanding of the directions, that we lost our way. Or—From misunderstanding the directions we lost our way.

In tracing his history, we discover little that is worthy of imitation.

By reading books written by the best authors, his mind became highly improved.

3. By too eager pursuit, he ran a great risk of being disappointed.

He had not long enjoyed repose, before he began to be weary of having nothing to do.

He was greatly heated, and drank with avidity.

Though his conduct was, in some respects, exceptionable, yet he durst not commit so great an offence, as that which was proposed to him.

A second deluge learning thus o'erran;

And the monks finish'd what the Goths began.

If some events had not fallen out very unexpectedly, I should have been present.

He would have gone with us, had he been invited.

He returned the goods which he had stolen, and made all the reparation in his power.

They have chosen the part of honour and virtue.

His vices have weakened his mind, and broken his health.

He had mistaken his true interest, and found himself forsaken by his former adherents.

The bread that has been eaten is soon forgotten.

No contentions have arisen amongst them, since their reconciliation.

The cloth had no seam, but was woven throughout.

The French language is spoken in every state in Europe.

His resolution was too strong to be shaken by slight opposition.

He was not much restrained afterwards, having taken improper liberties at first.

He has not yet worn off the rough manners, which he brought with him.

You who have forsaken your friends, are entitled to no confidence.

They who have borne a part in the labour, shall share the rewards.

When the rules have been wantonly broken, there can be no plea for favour.

He writes as the best authors would have written, had they written on the same subject.

He heaped up great riches, but passed his time miserably.

He talked and stamped with such vehemence, that he was suspected to be insane.

RULE XV.

He was not often pleasing, because he was vain.

William acted nobly, though he was unsuccessful.

We may live happily, though our possessions are small.

From whence we may likewise date the period of this event.

It cannot therefore be impertinent or ridiculous to remonstrate.

He offered an apology, which not being admitted, he became submissive.

These things should never be separated.

Unless he have more government of himself, he will always be discontented.

No sovereign was ever so much beloved by the people.

He was determined to invite the king back, and to call his friends together.

A boy so well educated gives great hopes to his friends.

He found her not only employed, but also pleased and tranquil.

We should always prefer our duty to our pleasure.

It is impossible to be at work continually.

The heavenly bodies are perpetually in motion.

Not having known, or not having considered, the measures proposed, he failed of success.

My opinion was given upon a rather cursory perusal of the book.

It is too common with mankind, to be totally engrossed, and overcome, by present events.

When the Romans were pressed with a foreign enemy, the women voluntarily contributed all their rings and jewels, to assist the government.

The following sentences exemplify the notes and observations under RULE XV.

1. They could not persuade him, though they were ever so eloquent.

If some persons' opportunities were ever so favourable, they are too indolent to improve them.

2. He drew up a petition, in which he too freely represented his own merits.

His follies had reduced him to a situation, in which he had much to fear, and nothing to hope.

It is reported that the prince will come hither tomorrow.

George is active; he walked thither in less than an hour.

Whither are you all going in such haste?

Where have they been since they left the city?

3. Charles left the seminary too early, and from that time he has made very little improvement. Or—and has since made, &c.

Nothing is better worth the time and attention of young persons, than the acquisition of knowledge and virtue.

RULE XVI.

NEITHER riches nor honours, nor any such perishing goods, can satisfy the desires of an immortal spirit.

Be honest, and take no shape or semblance of disguise.

We need not, and we do not, confine his operations to narrow limits.

I cannot comply with the proposal, either at present, or at any other time.

There can be nothing more insignificant than vanity.

Nothing ever affected her so much as this misconduct of her child.

Do not interrupt me thyself, nor let any one disturb my retirement. Or—neither interrupt me thyself, nor let any one, &c.

These people do not judge wisely, nor take proper measures to effect their purpose.

The measure is so exceptionable, that we cannot by any means permit it.

I have received no information on the subject, either from him, or from his friend.

Neither precept nor discipline is so forcible as example.

Neither the king nor the queen was at all deceived in the business.

RULE XVII.

WE are all accountable creatures, each for himself.

They willingly, and of themselves, endeavoured to make up the difference.

He laid the suspicion upon somebody, I know not upon whom, in the company.

I hope it is not I with whom thou art displeased.

To poor us there is not much hope remaining.

Does that boy know to whom he speaks? To whom does he offer such language?

It was not with him that they were so angry.

What concord can subsist between those who commit crimes, and them who abhor them?

The person, with whom I travelled, has sold the horse on which he rode during our journey.

It is not with me thou art engaged.

From whom didst thou receive that intelligence?

The following examples are adapted to the notes and observations under RULE XVII.

1. To have no one to whom we heartily wish well, and for whom we are warmly concerned, is a deplorable state.

He is a friend to whom I am highly indebted.

2. On these occasions, the pronoun is governed by the preceding word, and consequently agrees with it.

They were refused entrance into the house, and forcibly driven from it.

3. We are often disappointed in things, which, before possession, promised much enjoyment.

I have frequently desired their company, but have always hitherto been disappointed of that pleasure.

4. She finds a difficulty in fixing her mind. Or—She finds it difficult to fix her mind.

Her sobriety is no derogation from her understanding.

There was no water, and he died of thirst.

We can fully confide in none but the truly good.

I have no occasion for his services.

Many have profited by good advice.

Many ridiculous practices are at present brought into vogue.

The error was occasioned by compliance with earnest entreaty.

This is a principle that is consonant to our nature.

We should entertain no prejudices against simple and rustic persons.

They are at present resolved on doing their duty. Or—to do their duty.

That boy is known by the name of the Idler.

Though conformable to custom, it is not warrantable.

This remark is founded on truth.

His parents think of him, and his improvements, with pleasure and hope.

His excuse was admitted by his master.

What went ye out to see?

There appears to have been a million of men brought into the field.

His present was accepted by his friends.

More than a thousand men were destroyed.

It is my request, that he will be particular in speaking on the following points.

The Saxons reduced the greater part of Britain under their power.

He lives opposite to the Royal-Exchange.

Their house is situated on the north-east side of the road.

The performance was approved by all who understood it.

He was accused of having acted unfairly.

She has an abhorrence of all deceitful conduct.

They were at some distance from home, when the accident happened.

His deportment was adapted to conciliate regard.

My father writes to me very frequently.

Their conduct was agreeable to their profession.

We went leisurely up stairs, and came hastily down. We shall write above stairs this forenoon, and below stairs in the afternoon.

The politeness of the world has the same resemblance to benevolence, that the shadow has to the substance.

He had a taste for such studies, and pursued them earnestly.

When we have had a true taste of the pleasures of virtue, we can have no relish for those of vice.

How happy is it to know how to live at times with one's self, to leave one's self with regret, to find one's self again with pleasure! The world then is less necessary to us.

Civility makes its way with every kind of persons. Or—amongst all kinds of persons.

5. I went to London, after having resided a year in France; and I now live at Islington.

They have just landed at Hull, and are going to Liverpool. They intend to reside some time in Ireland.

RULE XVIII.

If a man say, I love God, and hate his brother, he is a liar.

Did he not tell thee his fault, and entreat thee to forgive him?

My brother and he are tolerable grammarians.

If he understand the subject, and attend to it industriously, he can scarcely fail of success.

You and we enjoy many privileges.

If a man have a hundred sheep, and one of them should go astray, will he not leave the ninety and nine, and go into the mountains, and seek that which is gone astray?

She and he are very unhappily connected.

To be moderate in our views, and to proceed temperately in the pursuit of them, is the best way to ensure success.

Between thee and me there is some disparity of years ; but none between him and her.

By forming themselves on fantastic models, and copying with one another in the reigning follies, the young begin with being ridiculous, and end in being vicious and immoral.

We have met with many disappointments ; and, if life continue, we shall probably meet with many more.

Rank may confer influence, but it will not necessarily produce virtue.

He does not want courage, but he is defective in sensibility.

These people have indeed acquired great riches, but they do not command esteem.

Our season of improvement is short ; and, whether used or not, it will soon pass away.

He might have been happy, and he is now fully convinced of it.

Learning strengthens the mind ; and, if properly applied, it would improve our morals too.

RULE XIX.

If an untaught person chance to think rightly, he knows not how to convey his thoughts accurately to another.

Though he urge me yet more earnestly, I shall not comply, unless he advance more forcible reasons.

I shall walk in the fields to-day, unless it rain.

As the governess was present, the children behaved properly.

She disapproved the measure, because it was very improper.

Though he is high, he hath respect to the lowly.

Though he was thy friend, he did not attempt to justify thy conduct.

Whether he improves or not, I cannot determine.

Though the fact is extraordinary, it certainly did happen.

Remember what thou wast, and be humble.

O! that his heart were tender, and susceptible of the woes of others.

Shall then this verse to future age pretend,

Thou wast my guide, philosopher, and friend?

The examples which follow, are suited to the notes and observations under RULE XIX.

1. Despise not any condition, lest it happen to be thy own.

Let him that is sanguine, take heed lest he mis- carry.

If he do but intimate his desire, it is sufficient to prompt obedience.

Take care that thou break not any of the established rules.

Though he does praise her, it is only for her beauty.

If thou dost not forgive, perhaps thou wilt not be forgiven.

2. His confused behaviour made it reasonable to suppose that he was guilty.

He is so conscious of deserving the rebuke, that he dares not make any reply.

His apology was so plausible, that many befriended him, and thought he was innocent.

3. If one man prefers a life of industry, it is because he has an idea of comfort in wealth; if another prefers a life of gaiety, it is from a like idea concerning pleasure.

○ No one engages in that business, unless he aims at reputation, or hopes for some singular advantage.

Though the design is laudable; and favourable to our interest, it will involve much anxiety and labour.

4. Unless he learn faster, he will be no scholar.

Though he fall, he shall not be utterly cast down.

On condition that he come, I will consent to stay.

However that affair terminate, my conduct will be unimpeachable. Or—may terminate.

If virtue reward us not, so soon as we desire, the payment will be made with interest.

Until repentance compose his mind, he will be a stranger to peace.

Whether he confess or not, the truth will certainly be discovered.

If thou censure uncharitably, thou wilt be entitled to no favour.

Though, at times, the ascent to the temple of virtue, appears steep and craggy, be not discouraged. Persevere until thou gain the summit: there all is order, beauty, and pleasure.

If Charlotte desires to gain esteem and love, she does not employ the proper means.

Unless the accountant deceives me, my estate is considerably improved.

Though self-government produces some uneasiness, it is light, when compared with the pain of vicious indulgence.

Whether he thinks as he speaks, time will discover.

If thou censurest uncharitably, thou deservest no favour.

Though virtue appears severe, she is truly amiable.

Though success is very doubtful, it is proper that he endeavour to succeed.

5. If thou hast promised, be faithful to thy engagement.

Though he has proved his right to submission, he is too generous to exact it.

Unless he has improved, he is unfit for the office.

6. If thou hadst succeeded, perhaps thou wouldst not be the happier for it.

Unless thou shalt see the propriety of the measure, we desire not thy support.

Though thou wilt not acknowledge, thou canst not deny the fact.

7. If thou gavest liberally, thou wilt receive a liberal reward.

Though thou didst injure him, he harbours no resentment.

It would be well, if the report were only the misrepresentation of her enemies.

Were he ever so great and opulent, this conduct would debase him.

Were I to enumerate all her virtues, it would look like flattery.

Though I were perfect, yet would I not presume.

8. If thou mayst share in his labours, be thankful, and do it cheerfully.

Unless thou canst fairly support the cause, give it up honourably.

Though thou mightst have foreseen the danger, thou couldst not have avoided it.

If thou couldst convince him, he would not act accordingly.

If thou wouldst improve in knowledge, be diligent.

Unless thou shouldst make a timely retreat, the danger will be unavoidable.

I have laboured and wearied myself, that thou mayst be at ease.

He enlarged on those dangers, that thou shouldst avoid them.

9. Neither the cold nor the fervid, but characters uniformly warm, are formed for friendship.

They are both praise-worthy, and one is as deserving as the other. Or—and equally deserving.

He is not so diligent and learned as his brother.

I will either present it to him myself, or direct it to be given to him.

Neither despise nor oppose what thou dost not understand.

The house is not so commodious as we expected it would be.

I must, however, be so candid as to own, that I have been mistaken.

There was something so amiable, and yet so piercing in his look, that it affected me at once with love and terror.

—————“ I gain’d a son ;

“ And such a son, that all men hail’d me happy.”

The dog in the manger would neither eat the hay himself, nor suffer the ox to eat it.

So far as I am able to judge, the book is well written.

We should either faithfully perform the trust committed to us, or ingenuously relinquish the charge.

He is not so eminent, and so much esteemed, as he thinks himself to be.

The work is a dull performance ; and is capable of pleasing neither the understanding, nor the imagination.

There is no condition so secure, as not to admit of change.

This is an event, which nobody presumes upon, or is so sanguine as to hope for.

We are generally pleased with any little accomplishments either of body or of mind.

10. Be ready to succour such persons as need thy assistance. Or—those persons who need, &c.

The matter was no sooner proposed, than he privately withdrew to consider it.

He has too much sense and prudence to become a dupe to such artifices.

It is not sufficient that our conduct, so far as it respects others, appears to be unexceptionable.

The resolution was not the less fixed, though the secret was as yet communicated to very few.

He opposed the most remarkable corruptions of the church of Rome; and, on this account, his doctrines were embraced by great numbers.

He gained nothing farther by his speech, than to be commended for his eloquence. Or—nothing by his speech but commendation for his eloquence.

He has little more of the scholar than the name.

He has little of the scholar but the name. Or—besides the name.

They had no sooner risen, than they applied themselves to their studies.

From no other institution, than the admirable one of juries, could so great a benefit be expected.

Those savage people seemed to have no other element than war. Or—no element but that of war.

Such men as act treacherously ought to be avoided. Or—The men who act treacherously, &c.

Germany ran the same risk that Italy had done.

No errors are so trivial, that they do not deserve to be mended. Or—as not to deserve amendment.

RULE XX.

IN some respects we have had as many advantages as they; but in the article of a good library, they have had a greater privilege than we have had. The undertaking was much better executed by his brother than by him.

They are much greater gainers than I am by this unexpected event.

They know how to write as well as he does; but he is a much better grammarian than they are.

Though she is not so learned as he is, she is as much beloved and respected.

These people, though they possess more shining qualities, are not so proud as he is, nor so vain as she appears.

The following examples are adapted to the notes and observations under RULE XX.

Who betrayed her companion? Not I.

Who revealed the secrets he ought to have concealed? Not he.

Who related falsehoods to screen herself, and to bring an odium upon others? Not I; it was she.

There is but one in fault, and that is I. Or—myself.

Whether he will be learned or not, must depend on his application.

Charles XII. of Sweden, than whom a more courageous person never lived, appears to have been destitute of the tender sensibilities of nature.

Salmafius (a more learned man than he has feldom appeared) was not happy at the close of life.

RULE XXI.

I GLADLY shunn'd him who gladly fled from me.

And this is that which men mean by distributive justice, and which is properly termed equity.

His honour, his interest, his religion, were all embarked in this undertaking.

When so good a man as Socrates fell a victim to the madness of the people, truth, and virtue, and religion, fell with him.

Neither the fear of death, nor the hope of life, could make him submit to a dishonest action.

An elegant house and much costly furniture were, by this event, irrecoverably lost to the owner.

The examples which follow, are suited to the notes and observations under RULE XXI.

1. These rules are addressed to none but the intelligent and attentive.

The gay and pleasing are, sometimes, the most insidious, and dangerous companions.

Old age will prove a joyless and dreary season, if we arrive at it with an unimproved, or corrupted mind.

The more I see of his conduct, the better I like him.

It is not only the duty, but the interest of young persons, to be studious and diligent.

2. These counsels were the dictates of virtue, and of true honour.

Avarice and cunning may acquire an estate; but they cannot gain friends.

A taste for useful knowledge, will provide for us a great and noble entertainment, when other entertainments leave us.

Without firmness, nothing that is great can be undertaken; nothing that is difficult or hazardous, can be accomplished.

The anxious man is the votary of riches; the negligent man, that of pleasure.

3. His crimes had brought him into extreme distress and perplexity.

He has an affectionate brother and sister; and they live in great harmony.

We must guard against either too great severity, or too great facility of manners.

We should often recollect what the wisest men have said and written, concerning human happiness and human vanity.

That species of commerce will produce great gain or great loss.

Many days, and even many weeks, pass away unimproved.

This wonderful action struck the beholders with exceedingly great astonishment. Or—with very great, &c.

The people of this country possess a healthy climate and a fruitful soil.

They enjoy also a free constitution and excellent laws.

4. His reputation and estate were both lost by gaming.

This intelligence excited not only our hopes, but our fears too.

His conduct is not scandalous; and this is the best that can be said of it.

This was the person whom calumny had greatly abused, and who sustained the injustice with singular patience.

He discovered some qualities in the youth, of a disagreeable nature, and which to him were wholly unaccountable.

The captain had several men who died in his ship, of the scurvy.

He is not only sensible and learned, but he is religious too.

The Chinese language contains an immense number of words; and he who would learn them must possess a great memory.

By presumption and vanity, we provoke enmity, and incur contempt.

In the circumstances in which I was at that time, my troubles pressed heavily upon me.

He has destroyed his constitution, by the very same errors by which so many have been destroyed. Or—same errors that have destroyed so many.

5. He is temperate, disinterested, and benevolent; an ornament to his family, and a credit to his profession.

Genuine virtue supposes our benevolence to be strengthened, and confirmed by principle.

Perseverance in laudable pursuits, will reward all our toils, and produce effects beyond our calculation.

It is happy for us, when we can calmly and deliberately look back on the past, and anticipate the future.

The sacrifices of virtue will not only be rewarded hereafter, but they will be recompensed even in this life.

All those who were possessed of any office, resigned their former commission. Or—All who were possessed, &c.

If young persons were determined to conduct themselves by the rules of virtue, not only would they escape innumerable dangers, but they would command respect from the licentious themselves.

Charles was a man of learning, knowledge, and benevolence; and, what is still more, he was a true Christian.

6. The temper of him who is always in the bustle of the world, will be often ruffled and disturbed.

We often commend, as well as censure imprudently.

How a seed grows up into a tree, and how the mind acts upon the body, are mysteries which we cannot explain.

Verily, there is a reward for the righteous! Verily there is a God that judgeth in the earth.

7. Changes are almost continually taking place, in men and manners, in opinions and customs, in private fortunes and in public conduct.

Averse either to contradict or to blame, the too complaisant man goes along with the manners that prevail.

By this habitual indelicacy, the virgins smiled at what they blushed at before.

They are now reconciled to what they could not formerly be prompted to by any considerations.

Censure is the tax which a man pays to the public for being eminent.

Had I served my Creator with but half the zeal, with which I served my king, that gracious Being would not have deserted me in my old age.

8. In all stations and conditions, the important relations take place, of masters and servants, husbands and wives, parents and children, brothers and friends, citizens and subjects.

Destitute of principle, he regarded neither his family, his friends, nor his reputation.

Religious persons are often unjustly represented as persons of romantic character, and of visionary notions, unacquainted with the world, and unfit to live in it.

No rank nor station, no dignity of birth, nor any possessions; exempt men from contributing their share to public utility.

9. Oh, my father! my friend! how great has been my ingratitude!

Oh, Piety! Ob Virtue! how insensible have I been to your charms!

10. That is a property which most men have, or which at least they may attain.

Why do ye that, which it is not lawful to do on the sabbath days? Or—to do which is not lawful, &c.

The shew-bread, which it is not lawful to eat, but for the priests alone. Or—to eat which is not lawful, but, &c.

Most, if not all of the royal Family, had quitted the place.

By these happy labours, they who sow, and they who reap, will rejoice together.

RULE XXII.

The work has received several alterations and additions.

The first proposal was inferior to the second, and essentially different from it.

He is more bold and active than his companion, but not so wise and studious.

Thou hearest the sound of the wind, but canst not tell whence it cometh, nor whither it goeth.

Neither has he, nor have any other persons, suspected so much dissimulation.

The court of France, or that of England, was to have been the umpire.

In the reign of Henry II. all foreign commodities were plentiful in England. Or—in the reign, &c. there was plenty of, &c.

There is no talent more useful towards success in business, or which puts men more out of the reach of accidents, than that quality generally possessed by persons of cool temper, and which is, in common language, called discretion. Or—no talent so useful, &c. or which puts men so much out of the reach, &c. as that quality, &c.

The first project was to shorten discourse, by reducing polysyllables to words of one syllable.

I shall do all I can, to persuade others to take the same measures for their cure which I have taken.

The greatest masters of critical learning differ among themselves. Or—do not always harmonize.

Micaiah said, if thou return in peace, then the Lord hath not spoken by me.

I do not suppose, that we Britons want genius; more than our neighbours.

The deaf man, whose ears were opened, and whose tongue was loosened, doubtless glorified the great Physician.

Groves, fields, and meadows, are, at any season of the year, pleasant to look upon; but never so much so as in the opening of the spring. Or—but never so agreeable as in the opening of the spring.

The multitude rebuked them, that they should hold their peace. Or—that they might be silent.

The intentions of some of these philosophers, nay, of many, might have been, and probably were good.

As to the wonderful civilities which have passed between the nation of authors, and that of readers, one might say, that they are an unanswerable argument of a very refined age.

It was an unsuccessful undertaking; the failure or miscarriage of which is, however, no objection at all to an enterprise so well concerted.

The reward is his due, and it has already been, or will hereafter, be given to him. Or—already been given to him, or will be hereafter bestowed.

By intercourse with wife and experienced persons, who know the world, we may improve a private and retired education, and rub off its rust.

Sincerity is as valuable as knowledge, and even more valuable.

No person was ever so perplexed as he has been to-day, or sustained such mortifications.

The Romans gave, not only the freedom of the city, but capacity for employments, to the inhabitants of several towns in Gaul, Spain, and Germany.

Such writers have no standard on which to form themselves, except what chances to be fashionable and popular. Or—have no other standard, &c. than that which chances, &c.

Whatever we do secretly shall be displayed in the clearest light.

To the happiness of possessing a person of such uncommon merit, Boethius soon joined the satisfaction of obtaining the highest honour his country could bestow. Or—joined that of obtaining, &c.

CHAP. II.

Containing corrections of the false Syntax, promiscuously arranged.

SECT. I.

VIRTUE and mutual confidence are the soul of friendship. Where these are wanting, disgust or hatred often follows little differences.

Time and chance happen to all men; but every person does not perceive whom it is that governs those powerful causes.

The active mind of man seldom or never rests satisfied with its present condition, how prosperous soever it may be.

Habits must be acquired of temperance and self-denial, that we may be able to resist pleasure, and endure pain, when either of them interferes with our duty.

The error of resting wholly on faith, or wholly on works, is one of those seductions which most easily mislead men; under the semblance of piety, on the one hand, and of virtue on the other.

It was no exaggerated tale; for she was really in that sad condition, in which her friend had represented her.

An army presents a painful sight to a feeling mind.

The enemies whom we have most to fear, are those of our own hearts.

Thou art the Messiah, the Son of God, who was to come into the world, and who has been so long promised and desired.

Thomas's disposition is better than his brother's; (or than that of his brother;) and he appears to be the happier man: but some degree of trouble is all men's portion.

Though remorse sometimes sleeps during prosperity, it will surely awake in adversity.

It is an invariable law of our present condition, that every pleasure which is pursued to excess, converts itself into poison.

If a man bring into the solitary retreat of age, a vacant, unimproved mind, where no knowledge dawns, where no ideas rise, which has nothing to feed upon within itself, many a heavy, and comfortless day he must necessarily pass.

I cannot yield to such dishonourable conduct; either at the present moment of difficulty, or under any circumstances whatever.

Themistocles concealed the enterprizes of Pausanias, either because he thought it base to betray the secrets trusted to his confidence, or because he imagined it impossible for such dangerous and ill-concerted schemes to take effect.

Pericles gained such an ascendant over the minds of the Athenians, that it may be said he had attained monarchical power in Athens.

Christ applauded the liberality of the poor widow, whom he saw casting her two mites into the treasury.

A multiplicity of little kind offices, in persons frequently conversant with each other, are the bands of society and friendship.

To do good to them that hate us, and, on no occasion to seek revenge, are the duties of a Christian.

If a man profess a regard for the duties of religion, and neglect those of morality, that man's religion is vain.

Affluence may give us respect, in the eyes of the vulgar, but it will not recommend us to the wise and good.

The polite, accomplished libertine, is miserable amidst all his pleasures: the rude inhabitant of Lapland is happier than he is.

The cheerful and gay, when warmed by pleasure and mirth, lose that sobriety and self-denial, which are essential to the support of virtue.

I knew thou wast not slow to hear the requests of thy obedient children.

SECT. 2.

Reason's whole pleasure, all the joys of sense,
Lie in three words, health, peace, and competence.

Having thus begun to throw off the restraints of reason, he was soon hurried into deplorable excesses.

These arts have enlightened many minds; and they will enlighten every person who shall attentively study them.

When we succeed in our plans, it is not always to be attributed to ourselves; the aid of others often promotes the end, and claims our acknowledgment.

Their intentions were good; but wanting prudence, they missed the mark at which they aimed.

I have not consented, nor shall I consent to a proposal so unjust.

We have subjected ourselves to much expense, that thou mayst be well educated.

This treaty was made at the castle of Earl Moreton the governour.

Be especially careful, that thou give no offence to the aged or helpless.

The business was no sooner opened, than it was cordially acquiesced in.

On account of his general conduct, he deserved punishment as much as his companion, and, indeed, deserved it more. He left a son of a singular character, and who behaved so ill that he was put in prison.

If he do but approve my endeavours, it will be an ample reward.

I had intended to write the letter, before he urged me to it; and, therefore, he has not all the merit of it.

All the power of ridicule, aided by the desertion of friends, and the diminution of his estate, was not able to shake his principles.

In his conduct was treachery, and in his words, were faithless professions.

Though the measure is mysterious, it is worthy of attention.

Be solicitous to aid such deserving persons, as appear to be destitute of friends.

Ignorance, or the want of light, produces sensuality, covetousness, and those violent contests with others about trifles, which occasion so much misery, and so many crimes in the world.

He will one day reap the reward of his labour, if he be diligent and attentive. Until that period come, let him be contented and patient.

What we have once, upon due consideration, adopted as rules of conduct, to these let us firmly adhere.

He has little more of the great man than the title.

Though he were my superior in knowledge, he would not thence have a right to impose his sentiments.

That picture of the Emperour, is a very exact resemblance of him.

How happy are the virtuous, who can rest under the protection of that powerful arm, which made the earth and the heaven!

Prosperity and adversity may be equally improved: both the one and the other proceed from the same author.

He acted conformably to his instructions, and cannot justly be censured.

The orators did not forget to enlarge on so popular a subject.

The language of Divine Providence to the exertions of every human agent, is, "Hitherto shalt thou come, and no farther."

Idle persons imagine, that how deficient soever they may be in point of duty, they at least consult their own satisfaction.

Good as the cause is, it is one from which numbers have deserted.

SECT. 3.

EVERY thing that we here enjoy, changes, decays, and comes to an end. All floats on the surface of that river, which, with swift current, is running towards a boundless ocean.

The winter has not been so severe as we expected it to be. Or—expected it would be.

Temperance, more than medicines, is the proper means of curing many diseases.

They understand the practical part better than he does; but he is much better acquainted with the theory than they are.

When we have once drawn the line, with intelligence and precision, between duty and sin, that line we ought on no occasion to transgress.

They who are distinguished by extraordinary talents, have extraordinary duties to perform.

No person could speak more strongly on this subject, nor behave more nobly, than our young advocate for the cause of toleration.

His conduct was so provoking, that many will condemn him, and few will pity him.

The people's happiness is the statesman's honour.

We are in a perilous situation. On the one side, and on the other, dangers meet us; and either extreme will be pernicious to virtue.

Several pictures of the Sardinian king's were transmitted to France. Or—Several of the Sardinian king's pictures, &c. Or—Several pictures belonging to the king of Sardinia, &c.

When I last saw him, he was grown considerably.

If we consult either the improvement of the mind, or the health of the body, it is well known that exercise is the great instrument of promoting both.

If it were they who acted so ungratefully, they are doubly in fault. Or—If they acted, &c.

Whether virtue promote our interest or not, we must adhere to her dictates.

We should be studious to avoid too much indulgence, as well as too much restraint, in our management of children.

No human happiness is so complete, as not to contain some imperfection. Or—as to contain no imperfection.

His father cannot hope for this success, unless his son possess uncommon powers, or apply himself with indefatigable labour.

The house framed a remonstrance, in which they spoke with great freedom of the king's prerogative.

The conduct which has been mentioned, is one of those artifices which most easily seduce men, under the appearance of benevolence.

This is the person to whom we are so much obliged, and whom we expected to see, when the favour was conferred.

He is a person of great property, but he does not possess the esteem of his neighbours.

They were solicitous to ingratiate themselves with those, whom it was dishonourable to favour.

The great diversity which takes place among men, is not owing to a distinction that nature has made in their original powers, so much as to the superior diligence, with which some have improved these powers beyond others.

While we are unoccupied by what is good, evil is continually at hand.

There is not a creature that moves, nor a vegetable that grows, but which, when minutely examined, furnishes materials for pious admiration.

What can be the reason of the committee's having delayed this business? Or—What can be the committee's reason for having delayed this business?

I know not whether Charles was the author, but I understood it to be him.

A good and well cultivated mind, is greatly preferable to rank or riches.

When charity to the poor, is governed by knowledge and prudence, every one admits it to be a virtue.

His greatest concern, and highest enjoyment, was to be approved in the sight of his Creator.

SECT. 4.

WHEN we see bad men honoured and prosperous in the world, it is some discouragement to virtue.

The furniture was all purchased at Wentworth's the joiner.

Every member of the body, every bone, joint, and muscle, lies exposed to many disorders; and the greatest prudence or precaution, or the deepest skill of the physician, is not sufficient to prevent them.

It is rightly said, that though faith justifies us, yet works must justify our faith.

If an academy be established for the cultivation of our language, let the members of it stop the license of translators; whose idleness and ignorance, if they be suffered to proceed, will reduce us to babble a dialect of French.

It is of great consequence that a teacher firmly believe, both the truth and the importance, of those principles which he inculcates on others; and not only that he speculatively believe them, but have a lively and serious feeling of them.

It is not the uttering, or the hearing of certain words, that constitutes the worship of the Almighty. It is the heart that praises, or prays. If the heart accompany not the words that are spoken, we offer the sacrifice of fools.

Neither flatter nor condemn the rich or the great.

He has travelled much, and passed through many stormy seas, and over extensive tracts of land.

You must be sensible that there is, and can be, no other person than myself, who could give the information desired. Or—no person but myself, &c.

To be patient, resigned, and thankful, under afflictions and disappointments, demonstrates genuine piety.

Alvarez was a man of corrupt principles, and detestable conduct; and, what is still worse, he gloried in his shame.

As soon as the sense of a Supreme Being is lost, the great check is taken off which keeps under restraint the passions of men. Mean desires, and low pleasures, take place of the greater and nobler sentiments, which reason and religion inspire.

We should be careful not to follow the example of many persons, who censure the opinions, manners, and customs of others, merely because they are foreign to them.

Steady application, as well as genius and abilities, is necessary to produce eminence.

There are, in that seminary, several students who are considerably skilled in mathematical knowledge.

If Providence clothes the grass of the field, and shelters and adorns the flowers that every where grow wild amongst it, will he not much more clothe and protect his servants and children?

We are too often hurried by the violence of passion, or ensnared by the allurements of pleasure.

High hopes, and florid views, are great enemies to tranquillity.

Year after year steals something from us; till the decaying fabric totter of itself, and crumble at length into dust.

I had intended to finish the letter before the bearer called, that he might not be detained; but I was prevented by company.

George is the most learned and accomplished of all the students, that belong to the seminary.

This excellent and well-written treatise, with others that might be mentioned, was the foundation of his love of study.

SECT. 5.

MANY would gladly exchange their honours, beauty, and riches, for that more quiet and humble station, with which thou art now dissatisfied.

Though the scene was a very affecting one, Louis showed little emotion on the occasion.

The climate of England is not so pleasant as that of France, Spain, or Italy.

Much of the good and evil that happen to us in this world, is owing to apparently undesigned and fortuitous events: but it is the Supreme Being who secretly directs and regulates all things.

To despise others on account of their poverty, or to value ourselves for our wealth, is a disposition highly culpable.

This task was the more easily performed, from the cheerfulness with which he engaged in it.

She lamented the unhappy fate of Lucretia, which seemed to her another name for chastity.

He has not yet cast off all regard for decency; and that is the most that can be advanced in his favour.

The girls' school was formerly better conducted than the boys'. Or—than that of the boys.

The loss of his much-loved friend, or the disappointments he has met with, have occasioned the total derangement of his mental powers.

The concourse of people was so great, that we passed with difficulty.

All the women, children, and treasure, that remained in the city, fell under the victor's power.

They have already made great progress in their studies; and, if attention and diligence continue, they will soon fulfil the expectations of their friends.

His propensity to this vice, against every principle of interest and honour, is amazing.

This kind of vice, though it inhabits the upper circles of life, is not less pernicious, than that which we meet with amongst the lowest of men.

He acted agreeably to the dictates of prudence, though he was in a situation exceedingly delicate.

If I had known the distress of my friend, it would have been my duty, and it certainly would have given me pleasure, to have relieved him.

They admired the candour and uprightness of the country man, as they called him.

The set of new curtains did not correspond to the pair of old blinds.

The tutor commends him for being more studious than any other pupil of the school. Or—for being the most studious pupil of the school.

Two principles in human nature reign;
Self-love to urge, and reason to restrain:
Nor this a good, nor that a bad we call;
Each works its end, to move or govern all.

Temperance and exercise, how little soever they may be regarded, are the best means of preserving health.

He has greatly blessed me; yes, even me, who, loaded with kindness, have not been sufficiently grateful.

No persons feel so much the distresses of others, as they who have experienced distress themselves.

SECT. 6.

DISGRACE not your station, by that grossness of sensuality, that levity of dissipation, or that insolence of rank, which bespeaks a little mind.

A circle, a square, a triangle, or a hexagon, pleases the eye by its regularity, as a beautiful figure.

His conduct was equally unjust and dishonourable. Or—was as unjust as it was dishonourable.

Though, at first, he began to defend himself, yet, when the proofs appeared against him, he durst not any longer contend.

Many persons will not believe that they are influenced by prejudices. Or—Many persons believe that they are free from prejudices.

The pleasure or pain of one passion, differs from that of another.

The court of Spain, which gave the order, was not aware of the consequence.

If the acquisitions which he has made, and which have qualified him to be a useful member of society, should be misapplied, he will be highly culpable.

There was much spoken and written on each side of the question; but I have chosen to take part with neither.

Were there no bad men in the world, to vex and distress the good, the good might appear in the light of harmless innocence; but they could have no opportunity of displaying fidelity, magnanimity, patience, and fortitude.

The most ignorant and savage tribes of men, when they looked round on the earth, and the heavens, could not avoid ascribing their origin to some invisible, designing cause, and feeling a propensity to adore their Creator.

Let us not forget, that something more than gentleness and modesty, than complacency of temper and affability of manners, is requisite to form a worthy man, or a true Christian.

One of the first, and most common extremes in moral conduct, is that of placing all virtue either in justice, on the one hand, or in generosity, on the other.

It is an inflexible regard to principle, which has ever marked the characters of those who have eminently distinguished themselves in public life; who have patronised the cause of justice against powerful oppressors; who, in critical times, have supported the falling rights and liberties of men; and have reflected honour on their nation and country.

When it is with regard to trifles, that diversity or contrariety of opinions shows itself, it is childish in the last degree, if this become the ground of estranged affection. When, from such a cause, there arises any breach of friendship, human weakness is then discovered in a mortifying light. In matters of serious moment, the sentiments of the best and worthiest may vary from those of their friends, according as their lines of life diverge, or as their temper, and habits of thought, present objects under different points of view. But by candid and liberal minds, unity of affection will still be preserved.

Desires and wishes are the first springs of action. When they become exorbitant, the whole character is likely to be tainted. If we suffer our fancy to create to itself, worlds of ideal happiness; if we feed our imagination with plans of opulence and splendour; if we fix to our wishes certain stages of high advancement, or certain degrees of uncommon reputation, as the sole stations of felicity; the assured consequence will be, that we shall become unhappy in our present state; unfit for acting the part, and discharging the duties that belong to it; we shall discompose the peace and order of our minds, and shall foment many hurtful passions.

PART IV.

PUNCTUATION.

CHAP. I.

Containing applications of the Comma, disposed under the particular rules.

RULE I. Gram. 4th edit. p. 220.

THE tear of repentance brings its own relief.

Manhood is disgraced by the consequences of neglected youth.

Idleness is the great fomentor of all corruptions in the human heart.

It is honourable to be a friend to the unfortunate.

All finery is a sign of littleness.

Slovenliness and indelicacy of character commonly go hand in hand.

The friend of order has made half his way to virtue.

Too many of the pretended friendships of youth, are mere combinations in pleasure.

The indulgence of harsh dispositions, is the introduction to future misery.

The intermixture of evil in human society, serves to exercise the suffering graces and virtues of the good.

RULE II.

Gentleness is, in truth, the great avenue to mutual enjoyment.

Charity, like the sun, brightens all its objects.

The tutor, by instruction and discipline, lays the foundation of the pupil's future honour.

Trials, in this stage of being, are the lot of man.

No assumed behaviour can always hide the real character.

The best men often experience disappointments.

Advice should be seasonably administered.

RULE III.

Self-conceit, presumption, and obstinacy, blast the prospect of many a youth.

In our health, life, possessions, connections, pleasures, there are causes of decay imperceptibly working.

Discomposed thoughts, agitated passions, and a ruffled temper, poison every pleasure of life.

Vicissitudes of good and evil, of trials and consolations, fill up the life of man.

Health and peace, a moderate fortune, and a few friends, sum up all the undoubted articles of temporal felicity.

We have no reason to complain of the lot of man, or of the world's mutability.

RULE IV.

An idle, trifling society is near a-kin to such as is corrupting.

Conscious guilt renders us mean-spirited, timorous, and base.

An upright mind will never be at a loss to discern what is just and true, lovely, honest, and of good report.

The vicious man is often looking round him with anxious and fearful circumspection.

True friendship will, at all times, avoid a careless or rough behaviour.

Time brings a gentle and powerful opiate to all misfortunes.

RULE V.

The man of virtue and honour will be trusted, relied upon, and esteemed.

Deliberate slowly, execute promptly.

A true friend unbores freely, advises justly, assists readily, adventures boldly, takes all patiently, defends resolutely, and continues a friend unchangeably.

Sensuality contaminates the body, depresses the understanding, deadens the moral feelings of the heart, and degrades man from his rank in the creation.

Idleness brings forward and nourishes many bad passions.

We must stand or fall by our own conduct and character.

The man of order catches and arrests the hours as they fly.

The great business of life is to be employed in doing justly, loving mercy, and walking humbly with our Creator.

RULE VI.

This unhappy person had often been seriously, affectionately admonished, but in vain.

To live soberly, righteously, and piously, comprehends the whole of our duty.

When thy friend is calumniated, openly and boldly espouse his cause.

Benefits should be long and gratefully remembered.

RULE VII.

True gentleness is native feeling, heightened and improved by principle.

The path of piety and virtue, pursued with a firm and constant spirit, will assuredly lead to happiness.

Human affairs are in continual motion and fluctuation, altering their appearance every moment, and passing into some new forms.

What can be said to alarm those of their danger, who, intoxicated with pleasures, become giddy and insolent; who, flattered by the illusions of prosperity, make light of every serious admonition, which their friends, and the changes of the world, give them.

RULE VIII.

If, from any internal cause, a man's peace of mind be disturbed, in vain we load him with riches or honours.

Gentleness delights, above all things, to alleviate distress; and, if it cannot dry up the falling tear, to soothe at least the grieving heart.

Wherever Christianity prevails, it has discouraged, and, in some degree, abolished slavery.

We may rest assured that, by the steady pursuit of virtue, we shall obtain and enjoy it.

RULE IX.

Continue, my dear child, to make virtue thy principal study.

To you, my worthy benefactors, am I indebted, under Providence, for all I enjoy.

Canst thou expect, thou betrayer of innocence, to escape the hand of vengeance?

Come then, companion of my toils, let us take fresh courage, persevere, and hope to the end.

RULE X.

Peace of mind being secured, we may smile at misfortunes.

Virtue abandoned, and conscience reproaching us, we become terrified with imaginary evils.

Charles having been deprived of the help of tutors, his studies became totally neglected.

To prevent further altercation, I submitted to the terms proposed.

To enjoy present pleasure, he sacrificed his future ease and reputation.

To say the least, they have betrayed great want of prudence.

RULE XI.

Hope, the balm of life, soothes us under every misfortune.

Content, the offspring of virtue, dwells both in retirement, and in the active scenes of life.

Confucius, the great Chinese philosopher, was eminently good, as well as wise.

The Patriarch Joseph, is an illustrious example of chastity, resignation, and filial affection.

RULE XII.

Nothing is so opposite to the true enjoyment of life, as the relaxed and feeble state of an indolent mind.

The more one speaks of himself, the less he likes to hear another talked of.

Nothing more strongly inculcates resignation, than the experience of our own inability to guide ourselves.

The friendships of the world, can subsist no longer than interest cements them.

Expect no more from the world than it is able to afford you.

RULE XIII.

He who is a stranger to industry, may possess, but he cannot enjoy.

Contrition, though it may melt, ought not to sink or overpower, the heart of a Christian.

The goods of this world were given to man for his occasional refreshment, not for his chief felicity.

It is the province of superiors to direct, of inferiors, to obey; of the learned, to be instructive, of the ignorant, to be docile; of the old, to be communicative, of the young, to be advisable and diligent.

Though unavoidable calamities make a part, yet they make not the chief part, of the vexations and sorrows that distress human life.

Idle curiosity, an inquisitive and meddling spirit, often interrupts the good order, and breaks the peace of society.

RULE XIV.

Vice is not of such a nature, that we can say to it, "hitherto shalt thou come, and no further."

One of the noblest of the Christian virtues, is, "to love our enemies."

Many too confidently say to themselves, "my mountain stands strong, and shall never be moved."

We are strictly enjoined, "not to follow a multitude to do evil."

RULE XV.

The gentle mind is like the smooth stream, which reflects every object in its just proportion, and in its fairest colours.

Beware of those rash and dangerous connexions, which may afterwards load thee with dishonour.

Blind must that man be, who discerns not the most striking marks of a Divine government, exercised over the world.

It is labour only which gives the relish to pleasure.

In that unaffected civility which springs from a gentle mind, there is an incomparable charm.

They who raise envy, will easily incur censure.

Many of the evils which occasion our complaints of the world, are wholly imaginary.

He who is good before invisible witnesses, is eminently so before the visible.

His conduct, so disinterested and generous, was universally approved.

RULE XVI.

The fumes which arise from a heart boiling with violent passions, never fail to darken and trouble the understanding.

If we delay till to-morrow what ought to be done to-day, we overcharge the morrow with a burden which belongs not to it.

By whatever means we may at first attract the attention, we can hold the esteem, and secure the hearts of others, only by amiable dispositions, and the accomplishments of the mind.

If the mind sow not corn, it will plant thistles.

One day is sufficient to scatter our prosperity, and bring it to nought.

Graceful in youth is the tear of sympathy, and the heart that melts at the tale of woe.

The ever active and restless power of thought, if not employed about what is good, will naturally and unavoidably engender evil.

He who formed the heart certainly knows what passes within it.

To be humble and modest in opinion, to be vigilant and attentive in conduct, to distrust fair appearances, and to restrain rash desires, are instructions which the darkness of our present state should strongly inculcate.

RULE XVII.

The greatest misery is, to be condemned by our own hearts.

The greatest misery that we can endure, is, to be condemned by our own hearts.

Charles's highest enjoyment was, to relieve the distressed, and to do good.

The highest enjoyment that Charles ever experienced, was, to relieve the distressed, and to do good.

RULE XVIII.

If opulence increases our gratifications, it increases, in the same proportion, our desires and demands.

He whose wishes, respecting the possessions of this world, are the most reasonable and bounded, is likely to lead the safest, and, for that reason, the most desirable life.

By aspiring too high, we frequently miss the happiness, which, by a less ambitious aim, we might have gained.

By proper management, we prolong our time: we live more, in a few years, than others do in many.

In your most secret actions, suppose that you have all the world for witnesses.

In youth, the habits of industry are most easily acquired.

What is the right path, few take the trouble of inquiring.

RULE XIX.

Providence never intended, that any state here should be either completely happy, or entirely miserable.

As a companion, he was severe and satirical; as a friend, captious and dangerous; in his domestic sphere, harsh, jealous, and irascible.

If the Spring put forth no blossoms, in Summer there will be no beauty, and in autumn, no fruit. So, if youth be trifled away without improvement, manhood will be contemptible, and old age, miserable.

RULE XX.

Be assured, then, that order, frugality, and œconomy, are the necessary supports of every personal and private virtue.

I proceed, secondly, to point out the proper state of our temper, with respect to one another.

Here, every thing is in stir and fluctuation; there, all is serene, steady, and orderly.

I shall make some observations, first, on the external, and next, upon the internal, condition of man.

Sometimes, timidity and false shame prevent our opposing vicious customs; frequently, expectation and interest impel us strongly to comply.

CHAP. II.

Containing insertions of the Semicolon and Comma.

THAT darkness of character, where we can see no heart; those foldings of art, through which no native affection is allowed to penetrate; present an object, unamiable in every season of life, but particularly odious in youth.

To give an early preference to honour above gain, when they stand in competition; to despise every advantage which cannot be attained without dishonest arts; to brook no meanness, and to stoop to no dissimulation; are the indications of a great mind, the presages of future eminence and usefulness in life.

As there is a worldly happiness, which God perceives to be no other than disguised misery; as there are worldly honours, which in his estimation are reproach; so there is a worldly wisdom, which, in his sight, is foolishness.

The passions are the chief destroyers of our peace; the storms and tempests of the moral world.

Heaven is the region of gentleness and friendship; Hell, of fierceness and animosity.

The path of truth, is a plain and a safe path; that of falsehood, is a perplexing maze.

Modesty is one of the chief ornaments of youth; and has ever been esteemed a presage of rising merit.

Life, with a swift, though insensible course, glides away; and, like a river which undermines its banks, gradually impairs our state.

The violent spirit, like troubled waters, renders back the images of things distorted and broken; and communicates to them all that disordered motion, which arises solely from its own agitation.

Levity is frequently the forced production of folly or vice; cheerfulness is the natural offspring of wisdom and virtue only.

Persons who live according to order, may be compared to the celestial bodies, which move in regular courses, and by stated laws; whose influence is beneficent; whose operations are quiet and tranquil.

CHAP. III.

Containing applications of the Colon, &c.

THE three great enemies to tranquillity, are vice, superstition, and idleness: vice, which poisons and disturbs the mind with bad passions; superstition, which fills it with imaginary terrors; idleness, which loads it with tediousness and disgust.

To sail on the tranquil surface of an unruffled lake, and to steer a safe course through a troubled and stormy ocean, require different talents: and, alas! human life oftener resembles the stormy ocean, than the unruffled lake.

When we look forward to the year which is beginning, what do we behold there? All, my brethren, is a blank to our view: a dark unknown presents itself.

Happy would the poor man think himself, if he could enter on all the treasures of the rich: and happy for a short time he might be: but before he had long contemplated and admired his state, his possessions would seem to lessen, and his cares would grow.

By doing, or at least endeavouring to do, our duty to God and man; by acquiring a humble trust in the mercy and favour of God, through Jesus Christ; by cultivating our minds, and properly employing our time and thoughts; by governing our passions and our temper; by correcting all unreasonable expectations from the world, and from men; and, in the midst of worldly business, habituating ourselves to calm retreat and serious recollection: by such means as these, it may be hoped, that, through the Divine blessing, our days shall flow in a stream as unruffled as the human state admits.

A Metaphor is a comparison, expressed in an abridged form, but without any of the words that denote comparison: as, “To the upright there ariseth light in darkness.”

All our conduct towards men, should be influenced by this important precept: “Do unto others, as you would that others should do unto you.”

Philip III. king of Spain, when he drew near the end of his days, seriously reflecting on his past life, and greatly affected with the remembrance of his mispent time, expressed his deep regret in these terms: “Ah! how happy would it have been for me, had I spent these twenty-three years, that I have held my kingdom, in retirement.”

Often is the smile of gaiety assumed, whilst the heart akes within: though folly may laugh, guilt will sting.

There is no mortal truly wise and restless at once. wisdom is the repose of minds.

CHAP. IV.

Containing insertions of the Period, &c.

THE absence of evil is a real good. Peace, quiet, exemption from pain, should be a continual feast.

Worldly happiness ever tends to destroy itself, by corrupting the heart. It fosters the loose and the violent passions. It engenders noxious habits; and taints the mind with false delicacy, which makes it feel a thousand unreal evils.

Feeding the hungry, clothing the naked, comforting the afflicted, yield more pleasure than we receive from those actions which respect only ourselves. Benevolence may, in this view, be termed the most refined self-love.

The resources of virtue remain entire, when the days of trouble come. They remain with us in sickness, as in health; in poverty, as in the midst of riches; in our dark and solitary hours, no less than when surrounded with friends and cheerful society. The mind of a good man is a kingdom to him, and he can always enjoy it.

We ruin the happiness of life, when we attempt to raise it too high. A tolerable and comfortable state, is all that we can propose to ourselves on earth. Peace and contentment, not bliss nor transport, is the full portion of man. Perfect joy is reserved for Heaven.

If we look around us, we shall perceive that the whole universe is full of active powers. Action is indeed the genius of nature. By motion and exertion, the system of being is preserved in vigour. By its different parts always acting in subordination one to another, the perfection of the whole is carried on. The heavenly bodies perpetually revolve. Day and night incessantly repeat their appointed course. Continual operations are going on in the earth, and in the waters. Nothing stands still.

Constantine the Great, was advanced to the sole dominion of the Roman World, A.D. 325; and soon after openly professed the Christian faith.

The letter concludes with this remarkable post-script: "P. S. Though I am innocent of the charge, and have been bitterly persecuted, yet I cordially forgive my enemies and persecutors."

The last edition of that valuable work, was carefully compared with the original M. S.

CHAP. V.

Containing applications of the Dash; of the Notes of Interrogation and Exclamation; and of the Parenthetical characters.

BEAUTY and strength, combined with virtue and piety,—how lovely in the sight of men! how pleasing to heaven!—peculiarly pleasing, because, with every temptation to deviate, they voluntarily walk in the path of duty.

Something there is more needful than expense;
And something previous e'en to taste;—'tis sense.

"I'll live to-morrow," will a wise man say?

To-morrow is too late :—then live to-day.

Gripos has long been ardently endeavouring to fill his chest: and lo! it is now full. Is he happy? and does he use it? Does he gratefully think of the Giver of all good things? Does he distribute to the poor? Alas! these interests have no place in his breast.

What is there in all the pomp of the world, the enjoyments of luxury, the gratification of passion, comparable to the tranquil delight of a good conscience?

To lie down on the pillow, after a day spent in temperance, in beneficence, and in piety, how sweet is it!

We wait till to-morrow to be happy: alas! why not to-day? shall we be younger? Are we sure we shall be healthier? Will our passions become feebler, and our love of the world less?

What shadow can be more vain than the life of a great part of mankind? Of all that eager and bustling crowd which we behold on earth, how few discover the path of true happiness? How few can we find, whose activity has not been misemployed, and whose course terminates not in confessions of disappointments?

On the one hand, are the divine approbation, and immortal honour; on the other, (remember and beware,) are the stings of conscience, and endless infamy.

As, in riper years, all unseasonable returns to the levity of youth ought to be laid aside, (an admonition which equally belongs to both the sexes,) still more are we to guard against those intemperate indulgences of pleasure, to which the young are unhappily prone.

The bliss of man, (could pride that blessing find,)
Is not to act or think beyond mankind.

Or why so long (in life if long can be)
Lent Heav'n a parent to the poor and me?

CHAP. VI.

Corrections of the promiscuous examples of defective Punctuation.

SECT. I.

EXAMPLES IN PROSE.

WHEN Socrates was asked, what man approached the nearest to perfect happiness, he answered: "That man who has the fewest wants."

She who studies her glass, neglects her heart.

Between passion and lying there is not a finger's breadth.

The freer we feel ourselves in the presence of others, the more free are they: he who is free, makes free.

Addison has remarked, with equal piety and truth, "that the creation is a perpetual feast to the mind of a good man."

He who shuts out all evasion when he promises, loves truth.

The laurels of the warrior are dyed in blood, and bedewed with the tears of the widow and the orphan.

Between fame and true honour, a distinction is to be made. The former is a loud and noisy applause: the latter, a more silent and internal homage. Fame floats on the breath of the multitude: Honour rests on the judgment of the thinking. Fame may give praise, while it withholds esteem: true honour implies esteem mingled with respect. The one regards particular distinguished talents: the other looks up to the whole character.

There is a certain species of religion, (if we can give it that name,) which is placed wholly in speculation and belief, in the regularity of external homage, or in fiery zeal about contested opinions.

Xenophanes, who was reproached with being timorous, because he would not venture his money in a game at dice, made this manly and sensible reply: "I confess I am exceedingly timorous; for I dare not commit an evil action."

He loves nobly, (I speak of friendship,) who is not jealous; when he has partners of love.

Our happiness consists in the pursuit, much more than in the attainment, of any temporal good.

Let me repeat it;—He only is great, who has the habits of greatness.

Prosopopoeia, or personification, is a rhetorical figure, by which we attribute life and action to inanimate objects: as, "The ground thirsts for rain;" "the earth smiles with plenty."

The proper and rational conduct of men, with regard to futurity, is regulated by two considerations: First, that much of what it contains, must remain to us absolutely unknown; next, that there are also some events in it, which may be certainly known and foreseen.

The gardens of the world produce only deciduous flowers. Perennial ones must be sought in the delightful regions above. Roses without thorns are the growth of paradise alone.

How many rules and maxims of life might be spared, could we fix a principle of virtue within; and inscribe the living sentiment of the love of God in the affection! He who loves righteousness, is master of all the distinctions in morality.

He who, from the benignity of his nature, erected this world for the abode of men; he who furnished it so richly for our accommodation, and stored it with so much beauty for our entertainment; he who, since first we entered into life, hath followed us with such a variety of mercies: this amiable and beneficent Being, surely can have no pleasure in our disappointment and distress. He knows our frame; he remembers we are dust; and looks to frail man, we are assured, with such pity as a father beareth to his children.

One of the first lessons, both of religion and of wisdom, is, to moderate our expectations and hopes; and not to set forth on the voyage of life, like men who expect to be always carried forward with a favourable gale. Let us be satisfied, if the path we tread be easy and smooth, though it be not strewed with flowers.

Providence never intended, that the art of living happily in this world, should depend on that deep penetration, that acute sagacity, and those refinements of thought, which few possess. It has dealt more graciously with us; and made happiness depend on uprightness of intention, much more than on extent of capacity.

Most of our passions flatter us in their rise. But their beginnings are treacherous; their growth is imperceptible; and the evils which they carry in their train, lie concealed, until their dominion is established. What Solomon says of one of them, holds true of them all, "that their beginning is as when one letteth out water." It issues from a small chink, which once might have been easily stopped; but being neglected, it is soon widened by the stream; till the bank is at last totally thrown down, and the flood is at liberty to deluge the whole plain.

Prosperity debilitates, instead of strengthening the mind. Its most common effect is, to create an extreme sensibility to the slightest wound. It foments impatient desires; and raises expectations which no success can satisfy. It fosters a false delicacy, which sickens in the midst of indulgence. By repeated gratification, it blunts the feelings of men to what is pleasing; and leaves them unhappily acute to whatever is uneasy. Hence, the gale which another would scarcely feel, is, to the prosperous, a rude tempest. Hence, the rose-leaf doubled below them on the couch, as it is told of the effeminate Sybarite, breaks their rest. Hence, the disrespect shown by Mordecai, preyed with such violence on the heart of Haman.

Anxiety is the poison of human life. It is the parent of many sins, and of more miseries. In a world where every thing is so doubtful; where we may succeed in our wish, and be miserable; where we may be disappointed, and be blessed in the disappointment; what means this restless stir and commotion of mind? Can our solicitude alter the course, or unravel the intricacy, of human events? Can our curiosity pierce through the cloud, which the Supreme Being hath made impenetrable to mortal eye?

No situation is so remote, and no station so unfavourable, as to preclude access to the happiness of a future state. A road is opened by the Divine Spirit to those blissful habitations, from all corners of the earth, and from all conditions of human life; from the peopled city, and from the solitary desert; from the cottages of the poor, and from the palaces of kings; from the dwellings of ignorance and simplicity, and from the regions of science and improvement.

The scenes which present themselves, at our entering upon the world, are commonly flattering. Whatever they be in themselves, the lively spirits of the young gild every opening prospect. The field of hope appears to stretch wide before them. Pleasure seems to put forth its blossoms on every side. Impelled by desire, forward they rush with inconsiderate ardour; prompt to decide, and to choose; averse to hesitate, or to inquire; credulous, because untaught by experience; rash, because unacquainted with danger; headstrong, because unsubdued by disappointment. Hence arise the perils to which they are exposed ; and which, too often, from want of attention to faithful admonition, precipitate them into ruin irretrievable.

By the unhappy excesses of irregular pleasure in youth, how many amiable dispositions are corrupted or destroyed ! How many rising capacities and powers are suppressed ! How many flattering hopes of parents and friends are totally extinguished ! Who but must drop a tear over human nature, when he beholds that morning which arose so bright, overcast with such untimely darkness ; that sweetness of temper which once engaged many hearts, that modesty which was so prepossessing, those abilities which promised extensive usefulness, all sacrificed at the shrine of low sensuality : and one who was formed for passing through life, in the midst of public esteem, cut off by his vices at the beginning of his course ; or sunk, for the whole of it, into insignificance and contempt ! These, O sinful pleasure ! are thy trophies. It is thus that, co-operating with the foe of God and man, thou degradest human honour, and blatest the opening prospects of human felicity.

SECT. 2.

EXAMPLES IN POETRY.

Where, thy true treasure? Gold says, "not in me:"
And, "not in me," the di'mond. Gold is poor.

The scenes of bus'ness tell us—what are men;
The scenes of pleasure—what is all beside.

Wo then apart, (if wo apart can be
From mortal man,) and fortune at our nod,
The gay, rich, great, triumphant, and august,
What are they? The most happy (strange to say)
Convince me most of human misery.

All this dread order break—for whom? for thee?
Vile worm!—O madness! pride! impiety!

Man, like the gen'rous vine, supported lives;
The strength he gains is from th' embrace he gives.

Know, Nature's children shall divide her care:
The fur that warms a monarch, warm'd a bear.
While man exclaims, "See all things for my use!"
"See man for mine," replies a pamper'd goose.
And just as short of reason he must fall,
Who thinks all made for one, not one for all.

Th' Almighty, from his throne, on earth surveys
Nought greater than an honest, humble heart:
An humble heart his residence, pronounc'd
His second seat.

Bliss there is none, but unprecious bliss.
That is the gem: sell all and purchase that.
Why go a begging to contingencies,
Not gain'd with ease, nor safely lov'd, if gain'd.

There is a time, when toil must be preferr'd,
Or joy, by mistim'd fondness, is undone.
A man of pleasure is a man of pains.

Thus nature gives us (let it check our pride)
The virtue nearest to our vice allied.

See the sole bliss Heav'n could on all bestow !
Which who but feels can taste, but thinks can know :
Yet poor with fortune, and with learning blind,
The bad must miss; the good untaught will find.

Whatever is, is right.—This world, 'tis true,
Was made for Cæsar,—but for Titus too.
And which more blest ? who chain'd his country, say,
Or he whose virtue sigh'd to lose a day ?

The first sure symptom of a mind in health,
Is rest of heart, and pleasure felt at home.

True happiness resides in things unseen.
No smiles of fortune ever bless the bad ;
Nor can her frowns rob innocence of joy.

Oh the dark days of vanity ! while here,
How tasteless ! and how terrible, when gone !
Gone ? they ne'er go : when past, they haunt us still.

Father of light and life ! Thou good supreme !
O teach me what is good ! Teach me thyself !
Save me from folly, vanity, and vice,
From ev'ry low pursuit, and feed my soul
With knowledge, conscious peace, and virtue pure,
Sacred, substantial, never-fading bliss !

If I am right, thy grace impart,
Still in the right to stay :
If I am wrong, Oh teach my heart
To find that better way !

Save me alike from foolish pride,
Or impious discontent,
At aught thy wisdom has denied,
Or aught thy goodness lent.

O lost to virtue, lost to manly thought,
Lost to the noble sallies of the soul,
Who think' it solitude to be alone !
Communion sweet, communion large and high,
Our reason, guardian angel, and our God.
Then nearest these, when others most remote ;
And all, ere long, shall be remote, but these.

Benevolence.

God loves from whole to parts ; but human soul
Must rise from individual to the whole.
Self-love but serves the virtuous mind to wake,
As the small pebble stirs the peaceful lake :
The centre mov'd, a circle strait succeeds ;
Another still, and still another spreads.
Friend, parent, neighbour, first it will embrace ;
His country next ; and next, all human race :
Wide and more wide, th' o'erflowings of the mind
Take ev'ry creature in of ev'ry kind.
Earth smiles around, with boundless bounty blest ;
And Heav'n beholds its image in his breast.

Happiness.

Know then this truth, (enough for man to know,)
“ Virtue alone is happiness below : ”
The only point where human bliss stands still,
And tastes the good without the fall to ill ;
Where only merit constant pay receives ;
Is blest in what it takes, and what it gives.

The joy unequall'd, if its end it gain;
And if it lose, attended with no pain.
Without satiety, tho' e'er so blest'd;
And but more relish'd as the more distress'd:
The broadest mirth unfeeling folly wears,
Less pleasing far than virtue's very tears.
Good, from each object, from each place acquir'd;
For ever exercis'd, yet never tir'd;
Never elated while one man's oppress'd;
Never dejected while another's blest'd;
And where no wants, no wishes can remain;
Since but to wish more virtue, is to gain.

Gratitude.

When all thy mercies, O my God!
My rising soul surveys,
Transported with the view, I'm lost
In wonder, love, and praise.

O how shall words, with equal warmth,
The gratitude declare,
That glows within my ravisht heart?
But thou canst read it there.

Thy providence my life sustain'd,
And all my wants redress'd,
When in the silent womb I lay,
And hung upon the breast.

To all my weak complaints and cries,
Thy mercy lent an ear,
Ere yet my feeble thoughts had learnt
To form themselves in pray'r.

Unnumber'd comforts to my soul
Thy tender care bestow'd,
Before my infant heart conceiv'd
From whom those comforts flow'd.

When, in the slipp'ry paths of youth,
With heedless steps, I ran,
Thine arm, unseen, convey'd me safe,
And led me up to man.

Through hidden dangers, toils, and deaths,
It gently clear'd my way ;
And through the pleasing snares of vice,
More to be fear'd than they.

When worn with sickness, oft hast thou,
With health, renew'd my face ;
And, when in sins and sorrow sunk,
Reviv'd my soul with grace.

Thy bounteous hand, with worldly bliss,
Has made my cup run o'er ;
And, in a kind and faithful friend,
Has doubled all my store.

Ten thousand thousand precious gifts
My daily thanks employ ;
Nor is the least, a cheerful heart,
That tastes those gifts with joy.

Through ev'ry period of my life,
Thy goodness I'll pursue ;
And, after death, in distant worlds,
The glorious theme renew.

When nature fails, and day and night
Divide thy works no more,
My ever grateful heart, O Lord !
Thy mercy shall adore.

Through all eternity, to thee
A joyful song I'll raise ;
For O ! eternity's too short
To utter all thy praise.

The Voyage of Life.

Self flatter'd, unexperienc'd, high in hope,
When young, with sanguine cheer, and streamers gay,
We cut our cable, launch into the world,
And fondly dream each wind and star our friend,
All in some darling enterprize embark'd.
But where is he can fathom its event ?
Amid a multitude of artless hands,
(Ruin's sure perquisite, her lawful prize,)
Some steer aright : but the black blast blows hard,
And puffs them wide of hope. With hearts of proof,
Full against wind and tide, some win their way ;
And when strong effort has deserv'd the port,
And tugg'd it into view, 'tis won ! 'tis lost !
Though strong their oar, still stronger is their fate :
They strike ; and, while they triumph, they expire.
In stress of weather, most, some sink outright.
O'er them, and o'er their names, the billows close :
To-morrow knows not they were ever born.
Others a short memorial leave behind,
Like a flag floating, when the bark's ingulph'd.
It floats a moment, and is seen no more :
One Cæsar lives ; a thousand are forgot.
How few, favour'd by ev'ry element,
With swelling sails, make good the promis'd port,
With all their wishes freighted ! Yet ev'n these,
Freighted with all their wishes, soon complain.
Free from misfortune, not from nature free,
They still are men ; and when is man secure ?

As fatal time, as storm. The rush of years
 Beats down their strength ; their numberless escapes
 In ruin end : and, now, their proud success
 But plants new terrors on the victor's brow.
 What pain, to quit the world just made their own,
 Their nest so deeply down'd, and built so high !—
 Too low they build, who build beneath the stars.

PART V.

PERSPICUITY AND ACCURACY.

First, with respect to single words and phrases.

CHAP. I.

Corrections of the errors that relate to Purity.

Gram. p. 239. 4th edit.

WE should be daily employed in doing good.
I am wearied with seeing so perverse a disposition.
I know not who hath done this thing.
He is in no wise thy inferior; and, in this instance, is not at all to blame.
The assistance was welcome, and seasonably afforded.
For want of employment, he wandered idly about the fields.
We ought to live soberly, righteously, and piously
in the world.
He was long indisposed, and at length died of melancholy.
That word follows the general rule, and takes the penultimate accent.
He was an extraordinary genius, and attracted much attention.
The fly, in its infantile state, lies all the winter enclosed in a ball.

He charged me with want of resolution; but in this censure he was greatly mistaken.

They have manifested great candour in all the transaction.

The conformity of the thought to truth and nature greatly recommended it.

The importance, as well as the authenticity of the books, has been clearly displayed.

It is difficult to discover the spirit and design of some laws.

The disposition which he exhibited, was both unnatural and uncomfortable.

His natural severity rendered him a very unpopular speaker.

The inquietude of his mind, made his station and wealth far from being enviable.

I received the gift with pleasure, but I shall now more gladly resign it. Or—with greater pleasure resign it.

These are things of the highest importance to the growing age.

I am grieved with the view of so many blank leaves, in the book of my life.

I repent that I have so long walked in the paths of folly.

I think that I am not mistaken in an opinion, which I have so well considered.

They thought it an important subject, and the question was strenuously debated on both sides.

Thy speech betrays thee; for thou art a Galilean.

Let us not give too hasty credit to stories which may injure our neighbour: perhaps they are the offspring of calumny, or misapprehension.

The gardens were void of simplicity and elegance; and exhibited much that was glaring and whimsical.

CHAP. II.

Corrections of the errors relating to Propriety.

SECT. I.

I would as readily do it myself, as persuade another to do it.

Of the justness of his measures he convinced his opponent, by the force of argument.

He is not, in any degree, better than those whom he so liberally condemns.

He insists upon security, and will not liberate him till it be obtained.

The meaning of the phrase, as I understand it, is very different from the common acceptation.

The favourable moment should be embraced; for he does not continue long in one mind.

He exposed himself so much amongst the people, that he was once or twice in danger of having his head broken.

He was very dexterous in penetrating the views and designs of others.

If a little care were bestowed upon his education, he might be very useful amongst his neighbours.

He might have perceived, by a transient view, the difficulties to which his conduct exposed him.

If I should have a little leisure to-morrow, I intend to pay them a short visit.

This performance is of the same value as the other.

The scene was new, and he was seized with wonder at all he saw.

SECT. 2.

LET us consider the works of nature and of art, with proper attention.

He is engaged in a treatise on the interests of the soul and of the body.

Some productions of nature rise or sink in value, according as they more or less resemble those of art.

The Latin tongue was never spoken, in its purity, in this island.

For some centuries, there was a constant intercourse between France and England, by reason of the dominions which we possessed there, and the conquests which we made. Or—occasioned by the dominions, &c.

He is impressed with a true sense of the importance of that function, when chosen from a regard to the interests of piety and virtue.

The wise and the foolish, the virtuous and the vile, the learned and the ignorant, the temperate and the profligate, must often, like the wheat and the tares, be blended together.

SECT. 3.

AN eloquent speaker may give more numerous, but cannot give more convincing arguments, than this plain man offered. Or—may give more, but cannot give stronger, &c.

These persons possessed very moderate intellects, even before they had impaired them by the extravagance of passion.

True wit is nature dressed to advantage; but some works have more ornament than does them good.

The sharks, that prey upon the inadvertency of young heirs, are more pardonable than those, who trespass upon the good opinion of persons that treat them with great confidence and respect.

Honour teaches us properly to respect ourselves, and to violate no right or privilege of our neighbour: it leads us to support the feeble, to relieve the distressed, and to scorn to be governed by degrading and injurious passions. It must, therefore, be a false and mistaken honour, that prompts the destroyer to take the life of his friend.

He will always be with you, to support and comfort you, and in some measure to prosper your labours; and he will also be with all his faithful ministers, who shall succeed you in his service.

SECT. 4.

MOST of our sailors were asleep in their apartments, when a heavy wave broke over the ship, and swept away one of our boats, and the box which contained our compasses, &c. Our cabin windows were secured, or the vessel would have been filled. The main mast was so damaged, that we were obliged to strengthen it, and to proceed for Lisbon.

The book is very neatly printed: the distances between the lines are ample and regular, and the lines themselves on the opposite side of each leaf, exactly correspond to one another.

SECT. 5.

WHEN our friendship is considered, how is it possible that I should not grieve for having lost such a friend?

The hen being in her nest, was killed and eaten there, by the eagle. Or—The eagle killed the hen, flew to her nest in the tree, and eat her there.

It may be justly said, that there are no laws preferable to those of England.

The pretenders to polish and refine the English language, have been the chief persons to multiply its abuses and absurdities. Or—The chief thing, which these pretenders to polish and refine the English language have done, is to multiply its abuses and absurdities.

The English adventurers, degenerating from the customs of their own nation, were gradually assimilated to the natives, instead of reclaiming them from their uncultivated manners.

It has been said, that Jesuits can not only equivocate. Or—Jesuits are not the only persons who can equivocate.

We must not think that these people, when injured, have no right at all to our protection. Or—have less right than others to our protection.

Solomon the Son of David, and the builder of the temple of Jerusalem, was the richest monarch that reigned over the Jewish people.

Solomon, whose father David was persecuted by Saul, was the richest monarch of the Jews.

It is certain that all the words which are signs of complex ideas, may furnish matter of mistake and cavi. Or—all those words, &c.

Lisias, speaking of his friends, promised to his father, never to abandon them. Or—Lisias, speaking of his father's friends, promised to his father never to abandon them.

The Divine Being, ever liberal and faithful, heapeth favours on his servants. Or—The Divine Being heapeth favours on his liberal and faithful servants.

Every well-instructed scribe, is like a householder, who bringeth out of his treasure new things and old.

He was willing to spend one or two hundred pounds, rather than be enslaved.

Dryden, in the following words, makes a very handsome observation, on Ovid's writing a letter from Dido to Æneas.

Imprudent associations disqualify us for instructing or reproofing others. Or—Disqualify us for receiving instruction or reproof from others.

SECT. 6.

I SELDOM see a noble building, or any great piece of magnificence and pomp, but I think, how little is all this to satisfy the ambition of an immortal soul.

A poet, speaking of the universal deluge, says,

Yet when that flood in its own depths was drown'd,
It left behind it false and slipp'ry ground.

“When the waters of the deluge had subsided, they left,”
&c.

The author of the Spectator says, that a man is not qualified for a bust, who has not a good deal of wit and vivacity.

And Bezaleel made the laver of brass, and the foot of it of brass, of the mirrors used by the women.

And, in the lower deep, another deep

Still threat'ning to devour me, opens wide.

SECT. 7.

No fewer than two hundred scholars have been educated in that school.

The business, however laudable the attempt, was found to be impracticable.

He is our common benefactor, and deserves our respect and obedience.

Vivacity is often promoted, by presenting a sensible object to the mind, instead of an intellectual one.

They broke down the banks, and the country was soon overflowed.

The garment was decently formed, and sewed very neatly.

The house is a cold one, for it has a northern aspect.

The proposal, for each of us to relinquish something, was complied with, and produced a cordial reconciliation.

Though learn'd, well bred; and tho' well bred, sincere;
Modestly bold, and humanely severe.

A fop is a ridiculous character, in every one's view but his own.

An action that excites laughter, without any mixture of contempt, may be called a risible action.

It is difficult for him to speak three sentences successively.

By this expression, I do not mean what some persons annex to it.

The neglect of timely precaution was the cause of this great loss.

All the sophistry which has been employed, cannot obscure so plain a truth.

Disputing should always be so managed, as to re-mind us, that the only end of it is truth.

My friend was so ill that he could not sit up at all, but was obliged to lie continually in bed.

A certain prince, it is said, when he invaded the Egyptians, placed, in the front of his army, a number of cats and other animals, which were worshipped by those people. A reverence for these creatures, made the Egyptians lay down their arms, and become an easy conquest.

The presence of the Deity, and the care which such an august Being is supposed to take in our concerns, is a source of consolation.

And when they had kindled a fire in the midst of the hall, and had sat down together, Peter sat down among them.

By the slavish disposition of the senate and people of Rome, under the Emperours, the wit and eloquence of the age were wholly turned towards panegyric. Or—wholly employed in panegyric.

The refreshment came in seasonably, before they had lain down to rest.

We speak what we do know, and testify that which we have seen.

They shall fly as the eagle that hasteth to eat.

Now haunts the cliff, now traverses the lawn,
And flees the hated neighbourhood of man.

A creature of a more exalted kind
Was wanted yet, and then was man design'd.

He died by violence; for he was killed with a sword.

He had scarcely taken the medicine, when he began to feel himself relieved.

No place nor any object appears to him void of beauty.

When we fall into conversation with any person, the first thing we should consider, is, the intention of it.

Galileo invented the telescope; Hervey discovered the circulation of the blood.

Philip found difficulty in managing the Athenians, from the nature of their dispositions; but the eloquence of Demosthenes was the greatest obstacle to his designs.

A hermit is austere in his life; a judge, rigorous in his sentences.

A candid man acknowledges his mistake, and is forgiven; a patriot avows his opposition to a bad minister, and is applauded:

We have increased our family and expenses; and enlarged our garden and fruit orchard.

By proper reflection, we may be taught to correct what is erroneous, and to supply what is defective.

The good man is not overcome by disappointment, when that which is mortal dies; when that which is mutable, begins to change; and when that which he knew to be transient, passes away.

CHAP. III.

Corrections of the errors which respect Precision.

THIS great politician desisted from his designs, when he found them impracticable.

He was of so high and independent a spirit, that he abhorred being in debt.

Though raised to an exalted station, she was a pattern of piety and virtue.

The human body may be divided into the head, the trunk, and the limbs.

His end soon approached; and he died with great fortitude.

He was a man of so much pride, that he despised the sentiments of others.

Poverty induces dependence; and dependence increases corruption.

This man, on all occasions, treated his inferiors with great disdain.

There can be no order in the life of that man, who does not allot a due share of his time, to retirement and reflection.

Such equivocal expressions, mark an intention to deceive.

His cheerful, happy temper, keeps up a kind of day-light in his mind, and fills it with a steady and perpetual serenity.

Secondly. Perspicuity and accuracy, with respect to the construction of Sentences.

CHAP. I.

Corrections of the errors which relate to the Clearness of a Sentence.

SECT. I.

HENCE appears the impossibility that an undertaking so managed, should prove successful.

May we not here say with the poet, "that virtue is its own reward?"

Had he died before, would not this art have been then wholly unknown.

Not to exasperate him, I spoke only a very few words.

The works of art receive a great advantage, from the resemblance which they have to those of nature; because here not only the similitude is pleasant, but the pattern more perfect.

It may be proper to give some account of these practices, anciently used on such occasions, and discontinued only through the neglect and degeneracy of later times.

Sixtus the Fourth was, if I mistake not, a great collector at least of books.

If Lewis XIV. was not the greatest king, he was at least the best actor of majesty, that ever filled a throne.

These forms of conversation, multiplied by degrees, and grew troublesome.

Nor does this false modesty expose us to such actions only as are indiscreet, but very often to such as are highly criminal.

By greatness, I do not mean the bulk of any single object only, but the largeness of a whole view. Or—I mean not only the bulk of any single object, but, &c.

I was formerly engaged in that business, but I shall never be concerned in it again.

We frequently do those things, which we afterwards repent of.

By often doing the same thing, it becomes habitual.

Most nations, even the Jews not excepted, were prone to idolatry.

Raised to greatness without merit, he employed his power solely for the gratification of his passions.

SECT. 2.

THE embarrassments of the artificers, rendered the progress of the work very slow.

He found the place replete with wonders, with the contemplation of which he proposed to solace himself, if he should never be able to accomplish his flight.

They are now engaged in a study, the usefulness of which they have long wished to know.

This was an undertaking, which, in the execution, proved as impracticable, as every other of their pernicious, yet abortive schemes, had turned out.

He thought that the presbyters would soon become more dangerous to the magistrate, than the prelati- cal clergy had ever been.

Frederick, seeing it was impossible with safety, to trust his life in their hands, was obliged to take the Mahometans for his guard.

The emperor refused to convert the truce at once into a definitive treaty.

In the night, however, the miserable remains were taken down.

This is what we mean by the original contract of society ; which, though perhaps it has, in no instance, ever been formally expressed, at the first institution of a state, yet, in nature and reason, it should always be understood and implied in every act of associating together.

I have, in this paper, by way of introduction, settled the meaning of those pleasures of the imagination, which are the subject of my present undertaking ; and endeavoured, by several considerations, to recommend to my readers, the pursuit of those pleasures : I shall, in my next paper, examine the several sources from whence these pleasures are derived.

Sir Francis Bacon, in his Essay upon Health, where he particularly dissuades the reader from knotty and subtle disquisitions, has not thought it improper to prescribe to him, a poem, or a prospect ; and he advises him to pursue studies that fill the mind with splendid and illustrious objects, as history, poetry, and contemplations of nature.

The English reader, if he would see the notion explained at large, may find it in Locke's Essay on the Human Understanding.

Fields of corn make a pleasant prospect; and if a little care were bestowed on the walks that lie between them, they would display neatness, regularity, and elegance.

Though religion will indeed bring us under some restraints, they are not only tolerable; but, on the whole, desirable.

I have confined myself to those methods for the advancement of piety, which, by a strict execution of the laws, are in the power of a prince, limited like ours.

This morning, when, with great care and diligence, one of the gay females was looking over some hoods and ribbands, brought by her tire-woman, I employed no less in examining the box which contained them.

Since it is necessary that there should be a perpetual intercourse of buying and selling, and dealing upon credit, the honest dealer, where fraud is permitted or connived at, or hath no law to punish it, is often undone, and the knave gets the advantage.

Though energetic brevity is not adapted alike to every subject; we ought, on every occasion, to avoid its contrary, a languid redundancy of words. It is sometimes proper to be copious, but never to be verbose.

A monarchy, limited like ours, may, for aught I know, be placed, as it has often been represented, just in the middle point, from whence a deviation leads, on the one hand, to tyranny, and, on the other, to anarchy.

Having already shown how the fancy is affected by the works of nature, and afterwards considered, in general, how, in forming such scenes as are most apt to delight the mind of the beholder, the works both of nature and of art assist each other; I shall, in this paper, throw together some reflections, &c:

Let but one brave, great, active, disinterested, man arise, and he will be received, followed, and venerated.

Ambition creates hatred, shyness, discords, seditions, and wars.

The scribes made it their profession to study, and to teach the law of Moses.

Sloth saps the foundation of every virtue, and pours upon us a deluge of crimes and evils.

The ancient laws of Rome were so far from suffering a Roman citizen to be put to death, that they would not allow him to be whipped, or even to be bound.

His labours to acquire knowledge, have been productive of great success and satisfaction.

He was a man of the greatest prudence, justice, modesty, and virtue.

His favour or disapprobation was governed by the success or the failure of an enterprise.

He had a grateful sense of the benefits received, and did every thing in his power to serve his benefactor.

Many persons give evident proof, that either they do not believe the principles of religion, or that they do not feel their power.

As the guilt of an officer, if he prove negligent, will be greater than that of a common servant; so the reward of his fidelity will be proportionably greater.

The comfort annexed to goodness is the pious man's strength. It attaches his heart to religion. It inspires his zeal. It supports his constancy; and accelerates his progress.

SECT. 3.

These are the rules of the master, who must be obeyed.

They attacked the house of Northumberland, whom they put to death.

He laboured to involve in ruin his minister, who had been the author of it. Or—to ruin his minister, &c.

What he says is true, but it is not applicable to the point.

The French marched precipitately as to an assured victory; whereas the English advanced very slowly, and discharged such flights of arrows, as did great execution. When the former drew near the archers, the latter perceiving that they were out of breath, charged them with great vigour.

He was at a window in Litchfield, taking a view of the Cathedral, where a party of the royalists had fortified themselves.

We no where meet with a more splendid or pleasing show in nature, than what is formed in the heavens at the rising and setting of the sun, by the different stains of light, which show themselves in clouds of different situations.

There will be found, throughout this kingdom, a round million of creatures in human figure, whose whole subsistence, &c.

It is the custom of the Mahometans, if they see upon the ground, any printed or written paper, to take it up, and lay it aside carefully, as not knowing but it may contain some piece of their Alcoran.

The laws of nature are, truly, what Lord Bacon styles his aphorisms, laws of laws. Civil laws are always imperfect, and are often false deductions from them, or applications of them; nay, civil laws stand, in many instances, in direct opposition to the laws of nature.

It has not a sentiment in it, says Pope, that the author does not religiously believe.

Many act so directly contrary to this method, that, from a habit, which they acquired at the University, of saving time and paper, they write in so diminutive a manner, that they can hardly read what they have written.

Thus I have fairly given you my own opinion, relating to this weighty affair, as well as that of a great majority of both houses here; upon which I am confident you may securely reckon.

If, from the earliest period of life, we trace a youth who has been well educated, we shall perceive the wisdom of the maxims here recommended.

CHAP. II.

Corrections of the errors relating to the Unity of a sentence.

SECT. I.

A SHORT time after this injury, he came to himself; and the next day, was put on board his ship, and conveyed first to Corinth, and thence to the island of Ægina.

The Britons, daily harassed by cruel inroads from the Picts, were forced to call in the Saxons for their defence. These people reduced the greater part of the island to their own power; and drove the Britons into the most remote and mountainous parts. The rest of the country, in customs, religion, and language, became wholly Saxons.

By eagerness of temper, and precipitancy of indulgence, men forfeit all the advantages which patience would have procured; and incur the opposite evils to their full extent.

This prostitution of praise affects not only the gross of mankind, who take their notion of characters from the learned; but also the better sort of people, who, by this means, lose some part at least of their desire of fame, when they find it promiscuously bestowed on the meritorious and on the undeserving. Or—Not only the gross part of mankind, who take their notion of characters from the learned, are affected by this prostitution of praise; the better sort must also, by this means, &c.

All the precautions of prudence, moderation, and condescension, which Eumenes employed, were incapable of mollifying the hearts of those barbarians, and of extinguishing their jealousy. He must have renounced his merit and virtue which occasioned it, to have been capable of appeasing them.

He who performs every employment, in its due place and season, suffers no part of time to escape without profit. He multiplies his days; for he lives much in little space.

Desires of pleasure usher in temptation, and forward the growth of disorderly passions.

SECT. 2.

The notions of Lord Sunderland were always good. This nobleman, however, was a man of great expense.

In this uneasy state, both of his public and private life, Cicero was oppressed by a new and deep affliction, the death of his beloved daughter Tullia; which happened soon after her divorce from Dola-bella. The manners and humours of this man were entirely disagreeable to Tullia.

The sun approaching melts the snow, and breaks the icy fetters of the main. Here vast sea-monsters pierce through floating islands, with arms which can withstand the crystal rock; whilst others, that of themselves seem great as islands, are by their bulk alone armed against all but man. The superiority which he possesses over creatures of such stupendous size and force, should make him mindful of his privilege of reason; and force him humbly to adore the great Composer of these wondrous frames, and the Author of his own superior wisdom.

I single Strada out among the moderns, because he had the foolish presumption to censure Tacitus, and to write history himself. My friend will forgive this short excursion in honour of a favourite writer.

Boast not thyself of to-morrow; for thou knowest not what a day may bring forth. For the same reason, despair not of to-morrow: it may bring forth good as well as evil. Vex not thyself with imaginary fears. The impending black cloud, which is regarded with so much dread, may pass by harmless; or though it should discharge the storm, yet, before it breaks, thou mayst be lodged in that lowly mansion which no storms ever touch.

SECT. 3.

DISAPPOINTMENTS will often happen to the best and wisest men; sometimes to the wisest and best concerted plans. They may happen too, not through any imprudence of those who have devised the plan, nor even through the malice or ill-design of others; but merely in consequence of some of those cross incidents of life which could not be foreseen.

Without some degree of patience exercised under injuries, human life would be rendered a state of perpetual hostility: offences and retaliations would succeed to one another in endless train.

Never delay till to-morrow, what reason and con- science tell you ought to be performed to day. To-morrow is not yours; and though you should live to enjoy it, you must not overload it with a burden not its own.

We must not imagine that there is, in true religion, any thing which overcasts the mind with sullen gloom and melancholy austerity; or which derogates from that esteem, which men are generally disposed to yield to exemplary virtues. False ideas may be entertained of religion, as false and imperfect conceptions of virtue have prevailed in the world.

CHAP. III.

Corrections of the errors which respect the Strength of a sentence.

SECT. I.

It is six months since I paid a visit to my relations.

Suspend thy censure, till thy judgment on the subject can be wisely formed.

The reason of his having acted in the manner he did, was not fully explained.

If I were to give a reason for their looking so well, it would be that they rise early.

If I mistake not, he is improved both in knowledge and behaviour. Or—I think he is improved both in knowledge and behaviour.

Those two boys appear to be equal in capacity.

Whenever he sees me, he inquires concerning his friends.

The reason of his conduct will appear in the conclusion of this narrative. Or—His conduct will be accounted for in the, &c.

I hope this is the last time of my acting so imprudently.

The reason of his sudden departure, was that the case did not admit of delay.

The people gained nothing farther by this step, than to suspend their misery. Or—nothing by this step, but the suspense of their misery.

I have here supposed that the reader is acquainted with that great modern discovery, which is, at present, universally acknowledged by the inquirers into natural philosophy.

Few words in the English language are employed in a more loose and uncircumscribed sense, than fancy and imagination.

I intend to make use of these words in my following speculations, that the reader may rightly conceive the subject upon which I proceed.

Commend me to an argument like a flail, against which there is no fence.

How many are there, by whom these good tidings were never heard?

These points have been illustrated in so plain a manner, that the perusal of the book has given me satisfaction.

However clear the conduct which he ought to have pursued, he had not resolution to set about it.

I was much moved on this occasion, and left the place full of serious reflections.

They are of those that rebel against the light: they know not its ways, nor abide in its paths.

This measure may afford some profit, and some amusement. Or—both profit and amusement.

By a multiplicity of words, the sentiments are not set off and accommodated; but, like David equipped in Saul's armour, they are encumbered and oppressed.

Though closely occupied with the affairs of the nation, he did not neglect the concerns of his friends.

If, on the contrary, secrecy had been enjoined, his conduct was very culpable.

Less capacity, but more time, is required for this business.

He did not mention Leonora, nor her father's death.

The combatants encountered with such rage, that, eager only to assail, and thoughtless of defence, they fell dead upon the field together.

I shall begin with remarking the defects, and shall then proceed to describe the excellencies, of this plan of education.

Numberless orders of beings, to us unknown, people the wide extent of the universe.

His extraordinary beauty struck observers with admiration. Or—His beauty was so extraordinary, that it struck, &c.

Thought and language act and re-act upon each other. Or—act upon each other mutually.

Their interests were inseparably connected.

Employing all the circumspection which reason can suggest, let your prayers, at the same time, continually ascend to heaven for support. Or—While you employ all the circumspection which reason can suggest, let your prayers continually ascend to heaven for support.

SECT. 2.

The enemy said, I will pursue, I will overtake, I will divide the spoil.

While the earth remaineth, seed-time and harvest, cold and heat, summer and winter, and day and night, shall not cease.

A man should endeavour to make the sphere of his innocent pleasures as wide, as possible, that he may retire into them with safety, and find in them such a satisfaction as a wise man would not blush to take. This advantage we gain by means of the pleasures of imagination. Or—This satisfaction we enjoy by means of, &c.

The army was composed of Grecians and Carians, and Lycians, and Pamphylians, and Phrygians.

The body of this animal was strong, proportionable, and beautiful.

Nothing promotes knowledge more than steady application, and a habit of observation.

Though virtue borrows no assistance from the advantages of fortune, yet it may often be accompanied by them.

The knowledge which he has acquired, and the habits of application which he possesses, will probably render him very useful.

Their idleness, their luxury and pleasures, their criminal deeds, their immoderate passions, their timidity and baseness of mind, have dejected them to such a degree, as to make them weary of life.

I was greatly affected, so that I was obliged to leave the place, though my assistance had been pressing-ly solicited.

I strenuously opposed those measures, but it was not in my power to prevent them.

I yielded to his solicitation, for I perceived the necessity of doing so.

For the wisest purposes, Providence has designed our state to be chequered with pleasure and pain. As such, let us receive it, and make the best of what is appointed to be our lot.

In the time of prosperity, he had stored his mind with useful knowledge, with good principles, and virtuous dispositions : and these resources remain entire, when the days of trouble come.

He had made considerable advances in knowledge, though he was very young, and laboured under several disadvantages.

SECT. 3.

I have, with a good deal of attention, considered the subject, upon which I was desired to communicate my thoughts.

Whether, in any country, a choice altogether unexceptionable has been made, seems doubtful.

Let us endeavour to establish to ourselves an interest in him, who in his hands holds the reins of the whole creation.

Virgil, who, in the sixth book of his Æneid, has cast the whole system of platonic philosophy, so far as it relates to the soul of man, into beautiful allegories, gives us the punishment, &c.

And, at last, in the Pyrenean treaty, Philip the fourth was obliged to conclude a peace, on terms repugnant to his inclination, to that of his people, to the interest of Spain, and to that of all Europe.

It is likewise urged, that, in this kingdom, there are, by computation, above ten thousand parsons, whose revenues, added to those of the bishops, would suffice to maintain, &c.

And although persons of a virtuous and learned education, when they come forward into the great world, may be, and too often are, drawn by the temptations of youth, and the opportunities of a large fortune, into some irregularities, it is ever with reluctance and compunction of mind, because their bias to virtue still continues.

Were instruction an essential circumstance in epic poetry, I doubt whether, in any language, a single instance could be given of this species of composition.

Some of our most eminent writers have, as far as it regards the subsistence of our affections after death, made use of this platonic notion, with great beauty, and strength of reason.

Upon surveying the most indifferent works of nature, men of the best sense have been touched, more or less, with these groundless horrors and presages of futurity.

Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord.

Not every one that puts on the appearance of goodness, is good.

And there appeared to them Elias with Moses.

Your fathers, where are they? and the prophets, do they live for ever?

At last, after much fatigue, through deep roads and bad weather, we came with no small difficulty to our journey's end.

The praise of judgment, Virgil has justly contested with Homer; but his invention remains yet unrivalled.

Instead of being critics on others, let us employ our criticism on ourselves.

Leaving others to be judged by Him who searcheth the heart, let us implore his assistance, for enabling us to act well our own part.

After passion has for a while exercised its tyrannical sway, its vehemence may by degrees subside.

This fallacious art, instead of lengthening, debars thee from enjoying life.

Indulging ourselves in imaginary, often deprives us of real enjoyments.

When reduced to poverty, how will that nobleman be able to conduct himself, who was educated only to magnificence and pleasure?

It is highly proper that a man should be acquainted with a variety of things, the utility of which is above a child's comprehension: but is it necessary, or even possible, that a child should learn every thing it behoves a man to know.

When they fall into sudden difficulties, they are less perplexed, and when they encounter dangers they are less alarmed, than others in the like circumstances.

For all your actions, and particularly for the employments of youth, you must hereafter give an account.

SECT. 4.

Charity breathes habitual kindness towards friends, courtesy towards strangers, long-suffering to enemies.

Gentleness ought to form our address, to regulate our speech, and to diffuse itself over our whole behaviour.

The propensity to look forward into life is too often immoderately indulged, and grossly abused.

The regular tenor of a virtuous and pious life, will prove the best preparation for old age, for death, and for immortality.

These rules are intended to teach young persons to write with propriety, perspicuity, and elegance.

Sinful pleasures degrade human honour, and blast the opening prospects of human felicity.

In this state of mind, every object appears gloomy, and every employment of life is become an oppressive burden.

They will acquire different views, by entering on a virtuous course of action, and applying to the honourable discharge of the functions of their station.

By the perpetual course of dissipation, in which sensualists are engaged; by the excesses which they indulge; by the riotous revel, and the midnight, or rather morning hours, to which they prolong their festivity; they debilitate their bodies, wear out their spirits, and cut themselves off from the comforts and duties of life.

SECT. 5.

By what I have already expressed, the reader will perceive the business upon which I am to proceed.

May the happy message be applied to us, in all its virtue, strength, and comfort.

Generosity is a showy virtue, of which many persons are very fond.

These arguments were, without hesitation, and with great eagerness, embraced.

It is proper to be long in deliberating; but we should execute speedily.

Form thy measures with prudence; but divest thyself of anxiety about the issue.

We are struck, we know not how, with the symmetry of any thing we see; and immediately acknowledge the beauty of an object, without inquiring into the cause of that beauty.

With Cicero's writings, these persons are more conversant, than with those of Demosthenes, who, by many degrees, as an orator at least, excelled the other.

SECT. 6.

Our British gardeners, instead of following nature, love to deviate from it as much as possible. Or—instead of humouring, &c. love to thwart it, &c.

I have observed of late the style of some great ministers, very much to exceed that of any other writers.

The old may inform the young; and the young may animate the old.

The account is generally balanced ; for what we lose on the one hand, we gain on the other.

The laughers will be for those who have most wit ; the serious, for those who have most reason on their side.

If men of eminence are exposed to censure, on the one hand, they are as much exposed to flattery on the other. If they receive reproaches which are not due, they likewise receive praises that are not due.

He can bribe, but he cannot seduce : He can buy, but he cannot gain. He can lie, but he cannot deceive.

He embraced the cause of liberty faintly, and pursued it irresolutely ; he grew tired of it, when he had much to hope, and gave it up, when he had nothing to fear.

There may remain a suspicion that we over-rate the greatness of his genius, in the same manner as we over-rate the greatness of bodies, that are disproportioned and mishapen.

SECT. 7.

Sobriety of mind suits the present state of man.

As supporters of unlawful assemblies, these people were seized and punished.

To use the Divine name habitually, and without serious consideration, is highly irreverent.

From the kindness with which he was at first received, great hopes of success were entertained.

They conducted themselves craftily, and insnared us before we had time to escape.

To our confined and humble station it belongs not to censure, but to submit, trust, and adore.

The solace of the mind, under all its labours, is hope; and there are few situations which exclude it entirely.

The humiliation of the mighty, and the fall of ambition from its towering height, little concern the bulk of mankind.

Tranquillity, order, and magnanimity, dwell with the pious and resigned man.

Idleness, ease, and prosperity, have a natural tendency to generate folly and vice.

By a cheerful, candid, and uniform temper, he conciliated general favour.

We reached the mansion before noon. It was a strong, magnificent Gothic edifice.

I had a long and perilous journey, but a pleasing companion, who relieved the fatigue of it.

The speech was introduced in a sensible manner, which made a favourable impression.

The Commons made a warm remonstrance against so arbitrary a requisition.

The truly illustrious are they who do not court the praise of the world, but who perform the actions which deserve it.

By means of society, our wants are supplied, and our lives rendered comfortable; our capacities are enlarged, and our virtuous affections called forth into proper exercise.

Life cannot but prove vain to them who affect a disrelish of every pleasure, that is not both exqui-sitate and new ; who measure enjoyment, not by their own feelings, but by the standard of fashion ; who think themselves miserable if others do not admire their state.

By the experience of distress, an arrogant insensibility of temper is most effectually corrected ; as the remembrance of our own sufferings, naturally prompts us to feel for others when they suffer. But if Providence has been so kind as not to subject us to much of this discipline in our own lot, let us draw improvement from the harder lot of others. Let us sometimes step aside from the smooth and flowery paths in which we are permitted to walk, in order to view the toilsome march of our fellows through the thorny desert.

As no one is without his failings, few also are void of amiable qualities.

Providence delivered them up to themselves, and they became their own tormentors.

From disappointments and trials, we learn the insufficiency of temporal things to happiness, and are taught to seek it in religion and virtue.

CHAP. IV.

Corrections of the errors that relate to Figures of Speech.

No human happiness is so pure as not to contain any alloy.

There is a time when factions, by their vehemence, confound and disable one another.

I intend to make use of these words in my following speculations. Or—in the course of my speculations.

Hope, the cheering star of life, darts a ray of light through the thickest gloom.

This scheme was highly expensive to him, and proved the gulf of his estate.

He was so much skilled in the exercise of the oar, that few could equal him.

The death of Cato has, if I may be allowed to say so, rendered the Senate an orphan.

Let us be careful to suit our sails to the wind and weather; and to steer our vessel aright, that we may avoid the rocks and shoals, which lie every where around us.

At length Erasmus, that great injur'd name,
(The glory of the priesthood, and the shame)
Stemm'd the wild torrent of a barb'rous age,
And drove those holy Vandals off the stage.

In this our day of proof, our land of hope,
The good man has his clouds that intervene;
Clouds that may dim his sublunary day,
But cannot darken: even the best must own,
Patience and resignation are the pillars
Of human peace on earth.

On the wide sea of letters, 'twas thy boast
To croud each sail, and touch at ev'ry coast :
From that rich deep how often hast thou brought
The pure and precious pearls of splendid thought !
How didst thou triumph on that subject-tide,
Till vanity's wild gust, and stormy pride,
Drove thy strong bark, in evil hour, to split
Upon the fatal rock of impious wit.

Since the time that reason began to exert her powers, thought, during our waking hours, has been active in every breast, without a moment's suspension or pause. The current of ideas has been always flowing. The wheels of the spiritual engine have circulated with perpetual motion.

The man who has no rule over his own spirit, possesses no defence against dangers of any sort. He lies open to every insurrection of ill-humour, and every invasion of distress. Whereas he who is employed in regulating his mind, is making provision against all the accidents of life. He is erecting a fortress into which, in the day of danger, he can retreat with safety.

Tamerlane the Great, writes to Bajazet, Emperour of the Ottomans, in the following terms :—" Where is the monarch who dares resist us? Where is the potentate who doth not glory in being numbered among our attendants? As for thee, ignobly descended, since thy unbounded ambition hath subverted all thy vain expectations, it would be proper, that thou shouldst repress thy temerity, repent of thy perfidy, and become just and sincere in all thy transactions. This will secure to thee a safe and quiet retreat; and preserve thee from falling a victim to that vengeance, which thou hast so highly provoked, and so justly deserved.

It is pleasant to be virtuous and good; because that is to excel many others: It is pleasant to grow better; because that is to excel ourselves: It is pleasant even to mortify and subdue our lusts; because that is victory: It is pleasant to command our appetites and passions, and to keep them in due order, within the bounds of reason and religion; because this is empire.

THE END.

Just published,

And sold by LONGMAN and REES, No. 39, Paternoster-row; DARTON and HARVEY, No. 55, Gracechurch-street, London; and by WILSON, SPENCE, and MAWMAN, York:

THE ENGLISH READER;
OR PIECES IN PROSE AND POETRY,

Selected from the best Writers.

Designed to assist young Persons to READ with PROPRIETY and EFFECT; to IMPROVE their LANGUAGE and SENTIMENTS; and to inculcate some of the most IMPORTANT PRINCIPLES of PIETY and VIRTUE. With a few preliminary Observations on the PRINCIPLES of GOOD READING.

By LINDLEY MURRAY.

Price, bound, 3s. 6d.

“ The plan of this work is highly commendable, and the execution is good. We are particularly pleased with the Compiler’s having avoided every sentiment, that might gratify a corrupt mind, or, in the least degree offend the eye or ear of Innocence.”

Gent. Magazine, Feb. 1799.

NEW EDITIONS of the following Books may also be had of the above Booksellers.

ENGLISH GRAMMAR,

Adapted to the different Classes of Learners. With an Appendix, containing Rules and Observations, for assisting the more advanced Students to write with Perspicuity and Accuracy.

BY THE SAME AUTHOR.

The Fifth Edition, improved.

Price, bound, 3s.

“ This is a publication of much merit, and fully answers the professions in the Title. The Appendix con tains some of the best Rules for writing elegantly, and with propriety, that we recollect to have seen."

Monthly Review, July, 1796.

" This Grammar is, on many accounts, entitled to commendatory notice. Its materials have been carefully and judiciously selected ; its arrangement is distinct, and well adapted to the purpose of instruction ; and its expression is simple, perspicuous, and accurate. The Compiler has observed a due medium between extreme conciseness, and extreme minuteness of detail ; and he has very properly distinguished the leading heads from their subordinate illustrations, by printing them in a larger letter, &c."

See the Character at large in the Analytical Review, June, 1796.

" There appears, in this Grammar, a considerable share of judicious analysis and arrangement. The author applies his philological rules with great success, to some of the more striking anomalies in English phraseology."

Extract from the British Critic, Nov. 1796.

" We have, on a former occasion, expressed the satisfaction that we derived from the first publication of this work ; and we have only to add, concerning the present edition, that the alterations and additions, though not very large, are judicious, and therefore, so far, improvements ; and that we consider the work as very superior to most, if not all, of its predecessors on the same subject."

Monthly Review, January, 1798.

ENGLISH EXERCISES,

Adapted to the Grammar lately published by

L. MURRAY ; consisting of

Exemplifications of the Parts of Speech ;	Defects in Punctuation ; and
Instances of False Orthography ;	Violations of the Rules respecting Violations of the Rules of Syntax ;	Perspicuity and Accuracy.

Designed for the Benefit of Private Learners, as well as for the Use of Schools.

BY THE SAME AUTHOR.

The Fourth Edition.

Price, bound, 2s.

A KEY to the ENGLISH EXERCISES;
Calculated to enable private Learners, to become their own Instructors in Grammar and Composition.

BY THE SAME AUTHOR.

The Fourth Edition.

Price, bound, 2s.

✚ The EXERCISES and KEY may be had together.

Price, bound 3s. 6d.

“ We have been much pleased with the perusal of these Exercises. They occupy, with distinguished excellence, a most important place in the Science of the English Language; and, as such, we can warmly recommend them to the teachers of schools, as well as to all those who are desirous of attaining correctness and precision in their native tongue.”

Monthly Review, July, 1797.

“ For a particular account of the very useful English Grammar, to which these Exercises refer, we must request our readers to turn back to Review, vol. xxiii. page 646. The value of that work is greatly increased by this large collection of examples, under the heads above-mentioned. They are selected with great judgment, and very happily adapted to the purpose of correcting common errors in writing and speaking: they afford the learner a large field of employment; which, carefully gone through, either in writing or orally, will not fail to produce a habit of attention to accuracy.— With respect to the matter, as well as the language of these examples, we are much pleased with the Author's choice: both vulgarity and peculiarity of sentiment, are judiciously avoided.”

Extract from the Analytical Review, Sept. 1797.

“ These Exercises are, in general, well calculated to promote the purpose of information, not only with regard to orthography and punctuation, but also in point of phraseology, syntax, and precise perspicuity of composition.”

Critical Review, October, 1797.

“ This book has been accidentally mislaid; but we willingly repeat the praise we formerly gave the Author for his English Grammar. There is great judgment shown in these Exercises; and, what is no common merit, the greatest perspicuity in the adaptation of the examples to the several rules.”

British Critic, November, 1798.

Young persons who have left school, as well as persons more advanced in life, and who have not attained a competent knowledge of English Grammar, and the principles of accurate composition, may, by carefully perusing these Exercises, and comparing them with the Key, readily become their own instructors, and considerably improve themselves in this important branch of Literature. To render the corrections obvious and intelligible to all readers, the Key, which is necessary to the work, not only repeats every sentence at large, in its corrected form, but mostly distinguishes the variations by Italic characters.

AN ABRIDGMENT OF

L. MURRAY'S English Grammar. With an Appendix, containing an Exemplification of the Parts of Speech. Designed for the younger Class of Learners.

BY THE AUTHOR OF THE GRAMMAR.

The Third Edition, corrected.

Price, bound, 1s.

"Having already expressed at large our approbation of Mr. Murray's English Grammar, we have only, in announcing this Abridgment, to observe, that it appears to us to be made with great judgment, and that we do not know a performance of this kind better fitted for the use of children. This small Grammar has also the recommendation of being very neatly printed. It may be very properly used as an Introduction to the Author's larger work."

Analytical Review, October, 1797.

"An introductory book on Grammar cannot be made too plain and simple; and this Author has therefore done wisely, in selecting from his larger work, (noticed Brit. Crit. vol. viii. p. 567.) such particulars as form a convenient book of initiation for children. It is not intended by the Author, that the present Grammar should supersede his larger work, but that it should serve as an introduction to it. English Grammars are now so numerous, that selection becomes difficult; but Mr. Murray's is certainly one of those that are well executed."

British Critic, September, 1798.

See also the Monthly Review, November, 1797.

